Dear Trinity,
 Life is not ordered and bound by lines. Posed pictures, traditional copy and corny captions don't cut it. Real life is messy, opinionated and spontaneous.

This yearbook is a representation of Trinity's thoughts, reflections and experiences. The stories are all letters: no headlines, quotes or captions. Some of the letters are deeply personal, others are mainly informational, but all reflect the lives of the students and staff in 1993-1994 school year.

To compliment the personal and genuine letters, the photos included are of real life. It is highly unlikely that formally posed pictures realistically display students at Trinity. As a result, there are very few posed shots.

Years from now, students and staff may be amazed that our school was small enough that, for the most part, we did not need captions to identify each other. As for me, I think it's great. Welcome to a new approach to yearbooks. I hope you enjoy your peek into the lives of the students of 1993-1994. (Oh, some names have been changed to protect the innocent).

Dear Paul,

How's my favorite brother? Good I hope. I trust things are good at school. Things are pretty crazy for me.

Moving in was quite an experience. Mom and Dad were nuts. They were so frantic and hovering all the time. Were they like this when you started school? Dad wouldn't let me lift anything vaguely heavy and Mom was always telling Dad not to "over do it." Fortunately, the Orientation committee was helping kids move in. They had shopping carts to pile stuff into and haul around. That was a good idea.

I was anxious and nervous about meeting my roommate, Angela. It was uncomfortable at first, but after twenty minutes or so we were laughing about all the stuff we brought. I still don't know how we're gonna fit it all. Turns out she's a perfectionist too. We spent 2 hours arranging our furniture perfectly. Heaven only knows how long it will take to hang our posters! As you know, I am not used to sharing bedroom or bathroom space. So far so good, but it's bound to get to me sooner or later.

We went downtown one day for orientation. We walked around Chicago tied to other freshmen by the wrist. Each group went on a scavenger hunt thing. It was fun being in the city without Mom and Dad. For the first time in a long time, Mom and Dad did not know where I was. Oh the freedom!

Trinity seems great so far. My RA seems nervous but nice enough. I hope registration goes well. I've heard it can be rough. Since our last name is at the end of the alphabet, I have to go in the last group. Wonder if I could change my name?

I'm off to stuff my face at a Sundae bar extravaganza with 600 people I don't know. How's school for you? Call me or write soon.

Love,
Nicole

Christina,

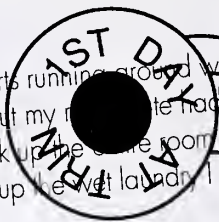

I arrived at Trinity to find people in these cheesy looking yellow shirts running around with shopping carts. I think their actual purpose was to help us move in, but my roommate had a different idea. She brought her extended family to help her. They took up the same room multiplying around putting her underwear away. My mom helped me hang up the wet laundry, I had forgotten to dry at home and then she left me here.

My first week consisted of all kinds of activities aimed at getting us acquainted with the campus, the city, and each other. The most memorable day began with a scavenger hunt in downtown Chicago. After running all over, my group stopped to ask a cop for directions back to our meeting place. He told us that we were so far away, we should just get a cab. Needless to say, the cop was wrong. We made it back and headed for our next activity. My group was going for a boat ride, but we never found the boat.

After a three hour walk in the August sun of the city, we boarded the bus to a White Sox game. There, the sky opened up and poured. On the way back to Trinity, our bus got stuck at some railroad tracks for an eternity, so we talked about Canada to pass the time. This was also the day that my suitemates moved in. What an impression I must have made- sweaty and soaked.

Orientation as a whole was a really diverse experience. I came knowing nobody and ended up meeting many strange people. I got to know the city of Chicago better. Hey, only nine months left until camp; so, I'm settling in and giving the year over to God. He's promised to bring me through anything and I'm going to hold Him to that one.

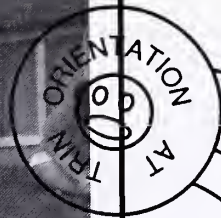

I miss you!

Danny,

What's up big guy? Did you have a good weekend at home? It was truly tragic that I had to stay at Trinity for the one weekend you were home. I know you worked your plans around me, but I had a chair gig this big deal event - the Gathering.

The Gathering is a two night event that Trinity holds every year basically to say "Yeah Trinity! We provide 'quality Christian education' in the Chicagoland area. Please empty your wallets now." I wanted to skip, believe me. I realize these kind of events are huge fund raisers for the school, but they drive me nuts.

The main source of entertainment was Trinity students. The String Ensemble and Flute Ensemble played dinner music. The Gospel Choir, the Concert Choir, the Honors Ensemble, and the Band all performed during the entertainment part of the evening. A men's quartet sang a song, a Senior guy and girl sang a duet, and a different Senior female sang as well. Add to this a slide show with very bad music playing as soundtrack and a series of awards to employees and you have one long and drawn out evening with way too many musical performances.

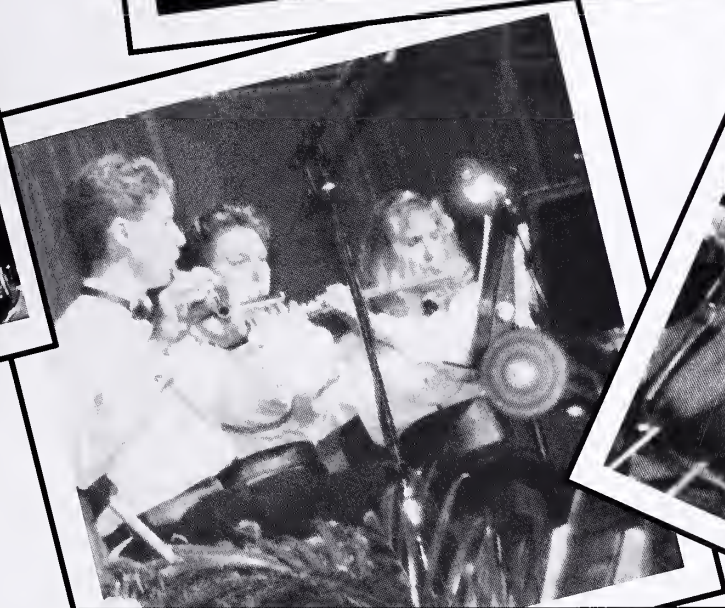

On paper this sounds absolutely ridiculous, but the two night affair was held in our gym. It sounds totally cheap and rinky dink to me too, but the Development department did a good job disguising the gym. They bought lots of flowers, fancy table cloths, candles, napkins, etc. The soccer team and the volleyball team served the dinner. My aunt and uncle said the food was good. I wasn't sure if they were teasing me or not since the cafeteria made it - I think they were serious though.

Well Thanksgiving is right around the corner and I WILL see you then. Why don't you call me when you get home? I miss you, but I think I'll live until Thanksgiving.

Yours in Organic Chemistry,
Sandra

Dear Mam,
 Haw are things at home? Has everyone recovered from the flu? I hope so. I still have na idea what I am going ta wear far Hallaween. Let me know if you have any good ideas far me.

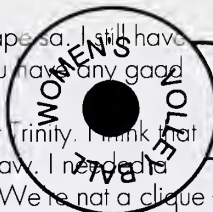

Valleyball is gaing well. I am really starting ta feel like I belong at Trinity. I think that has a lot ta da with the team. We really seem sart af like a family naw. I need a gaup af friends I could talk with and say hi ta an my way ta class. We re nat a clique - thank gaadness, you know I'd hate that. Our devatians before the games are excellent.

I think one af the reasons we're sa clase is because mast af the players are new. We have five freshmen and twa transfers an the team - we dan't have any seniors, isn't that strange? Plus, this is aur caach's, Sue, first year at Trinity too. It's like a fresh start far everyone. Plus, we spend a tan af time together. We practice every day far twa ta twa and half hours. On game days we spend about six hours together traveling and playing.

Nat only have we grown claser, but we've also raised aur level af play. Things were really rough at first. Sue warked us really hard in pre-season training. At the time I thought aur warkouts and practices were a little excessive, but I think they are beginning ta pay off naw. Stacy Pater is aur main setter. Even though she is a freshman, she keeps us confident and facused under pressure. Tammy Fischer and Heather Vanderhye are consistently strang servers. Suzanne Mannes is the only returning Junior player; she's a strang hitter.

Anyway, things are warking out far me. I'm sa glad ta be an the team. I can only laak farward ta next year and hope that we all remain gaad friends. Take care af yaurself Mam. I love you.

Dear Uncle Andy,

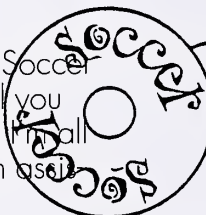

Mom tells me you're planning on running the Junior High Soccer Camp again this summer. That's great. I thought I should tell you that I won't be available to help at all in August or June, but I'm all yours if you need me in July. Let me know if you do need an assistant, I'd love to be there for camp again.

Right now I'm heavily involved with soccer here at Trinity. Some days I feel like I eat, sleep, and breathe soccer. It's hard to stay focused on my school work on days we have matches. You know me, the more time I spend playing, the more time I want to play. Just can't get enough.

You really should come and see us play sometime. The team is very young (half of the team is underclassmen), but we hardly show it. We started out the season by winning four of our first five games. Since then a lot of our games have gone into overtime and couple of our losses have been by one goal. You know those are hard to take. I believe the team really gets closer when those kind of things happen. Our closest games have been complicated by injuries and bad calls, but the team seems to rise above that and play to the finish. You know how I feel about the difference between a Christian athlete's and a non-Christian athlete's attitude. I am very glad I can play for a Christian school with a coach like Coach Ribbens.

Anyway, I hope your school year is going well. Let me know as soon as possible about camp this summer.

Take care,
Dave

Student Association

Minutes from the February 15, 1994 Student Association Meeting
14 representative present
6 representative absent

- I. Opening prayer
- II. Treasurer's report - Chris passed out and explained new, corrected budget reports. A few chuckled at the idea of a correct budget.
- III. Sub-committee reports
  - A. Academic Affairs - Garret reported that there are no affairs to be reported, at least no affairs academically.
  - B. Student Activities - The Valentine's Day dance was reported to be a dismal failure in that few people showed up and those that did insisted on doing the Hokey Pokey and the Y.M.C.A dance over and over again.
  - C. Student Ministries - Dave reported that Intervarsity is still doing their thing.
  - D. Courier - Josh apologized again for making it seem like nothing ever happens in Student Association.
  - E. Allelu - Robin reported that the first deadline was mailed and things look skewed.
- IV. New Business
  - A. Amendment -
The Student Association unanimously passed a motion to amend the constitution. The amendment will protect the interests of any mealcard-wielding student not willing to consume mashed potatoes, gravy, a slice of bread and the "meat of the day" more than five times in one week.
  - B. Chapel reactions -
Rev. Hamstra wanted to hear same reactions to the chapels and what he could do, if anything, to improve them. One representative suggested that chapel should be made mandatory for all students. He was quickly thrown out.
  - D. Student Development -
Dave Larsen asked for reactions to the Student Handbook and Unaffiliated Guide. One rep. said that she ran into trouble half-way through reading it "because all of the blue pages were upside-down."
  - E. A representative reported that a number of upperclassmen have been asking about the Q-bert game and when it will be fixed. It was assumed that fixing the game will result in a 3% tuition increase.
- V. Old Business
  - A. TV reception in South Hall - South Hall council has offered to sponsor an expedition to the roof of their residence hall. Although there appears to be an aerial antenna up there, television reception throughout South Hall generally stinks.
  - B. Parking -
A number of members offered to take part in a committee to find a solution to the parking problem. In exchange, they requested red "Faculty and Staff" parking stickers for their cars.
- VI. Closing prayer

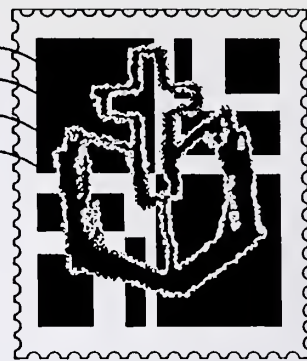

Dear Jason,

I have to tell you about our last IntersVarsity meeting. It was great! As usual, we opened with Lloyd on the guitar and Chris and Beth leading the songs ... we even got to do that fun one from camp!

We decided not to have a speaker and just discuss some controversial issues. You would have loved being there and having the opportunity to put your two cents in! We talked about how a Christian should respond to such topics as abortion, celebrating pagan holidays, and of course, alcohol on campus. It was really interesting to hear the opinions of others. I found it to be pretty challenging too. It made me really stop and think about where I stand on an issue, and whether my view would be pleasing in God's sight. I think that not having the usual speaker worked well. We took the time to listen to one another and to really hear what was said.

Jennifer,

Intervarsity was really fun tonight. We went out to the mall and played mall tag. Huh? you ask ... well we exchanged ID's, the person whose ID you got was the one you had to hunt down. After five minutes of scattering, we began. One group of people switched coats with each other, so we couldn't spot people by their usual attire. I spent my whole time ducking out of the way of any Trinity person that passed by. I never really bothered to catch my own person. It was great! Kelly and I found a great sale at the GAP.

That evening could definitely challenge anyone's opinion of IV being stuffy and boring ... how else could I have found myself in a maternity clothing store but by using it as an escape from the searching eyes of my peers. The salespeople looked just a bit perplexed.

In Him,
Brad

Hi Mom and Dad,

How are you doing? Everything's great here. I've decided to join our ProLife group. We've been doing a lot of great things. We stood out on LaGrange Road in Orland Park for a few hours in the Life Chain this fall. We held signs saying "Abortion Kills Children". It was great! Two people were able to picket Hillary Clinton when she came to Chicago to discuss her health care plan. In May we are planning to go on the Hike for Life which is sponsored by PASS, a ProLife crisis pregnancy organization near here. We'll be walking ten miles along Lake Michigan trying to help PASS raise money.

We're also making a lot of plans for next year. We have a Blood Drive that we sponsor twice a year, and we also want to do more picketing and spend more people to Washington D.C. I really feel that this group has forced me to put my prolife stance into action. Before, I always said I was prolife, but I did not live it. Now I act upon my convictions. Pretty neat stuff.

Dear Troy,
I am glad you're considering coming to Trinity. You asked for some information about our Science Club last time we spoke, so I did some investigating for you.

Many exciting things are happening this year in Science Club. The club has lots of new members. The President this year is Matt Gritters. The officers have planned many exciting activities with the help of the Science Department staff.

In the fall, they sponsor the annual Haunted Trail in Trinity's miniforest which is always a lot of fun. It is their most campuswide, visible, fundraising, active event. It really takes a lot of work, but it's a ton of fun scaring people in the forest around Halloween weekend. We also clean up the creek in the miniforest on a regular basis.

The club is busy planning activities for next year, some of which include more meetings, aluminum can recycling, the Haunted Trail, cleaning the creek as well as extra outings. They look forward to the new members in the group next year and hope to see you there!

Sincerely,
Tim

Dear Concert Choir,

Here's a note of thanks from me to you.

I've been on other tours, but this one stands out not only for the great music but also for the way you seem to enjoy each other's personalities and gifts. Tours allow for the leisurely development of character in the presence of others, and you seemed to find a way to celebrate each other very often. The solos, quartets, etc. were a matter of group pride and appreciation. You were cheerleaders for each other, and the affection was obvious to those of us in the audience.

That was also evident in the mutual admiration between you and Mrs. Van Wyck. It was clear that you enjoy working with each other, and we're blessed to have such a gifted director. The chemistry between director and choir is so very important, and it was apparent to me and those at the performances that you find pleasure in working with each other. Remember Psalm 100 from memory in Waupan?

We shared many things during tour. Arlo, the bus driver with the sense of direction of a misguided missile and the hairstyle of Niagara Falls in reverse. Cafeteria food at Dordt. Bathroom odors. Sweet and Lou. Too many fast food places and Floyd River sightings. Wild ties. Hunting season. Whimsical and healthy talk show discussions on the meaning of "romance." Sensory overload at the Mall of America. "Swarms of cows." God's care in the midst of bus failures. And the unsettling news of Mrs. Bootsma's illness.

I'll remember and long appreciate your toleration of my feeble attempts at humor, and the way you refined and improved the phrasing. I learned things about you, and you about me, that neither of us probably planned on revealing. But those sorts of discoveries are the things that make tours linger in our memories.

The tour was like a musical composition, full of quiet moments and bold crescendos. We experienced a great deal together, and I want to thank you for the privilege of going along with you. Watching you and listening to your public performances made me grateful and proud to have such an outstanding choir represent Jesus and the college out there on the road.

Sincerely,
Your mascot

Dear Julie,

The Student Nurses Association has been an important part of my life at Trinity this year. It has given me a great opportunity to learn more about the nursing profession while also getting to know the professors and students in a new light. I think you would really benefit by becoming a member, if you have decided for certain that you will go into the nursing profession and study at Trinity.

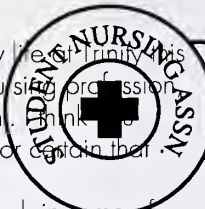

Just what is the Student Nursing Association? Well let me try to explain some of what we are about. We have three basic purposes.

First, we exist so that nursing students and professors can get to know each other outside the classroom. Second, we raise funds for various organizations, such as the March of Dimes. Our major fund raiser this year was for the Up With Dawns, an organization that helps those with Dawns Syndrome. We sold suckers to help this worthy cause. The third main thing that we do is attempt to keep up with the major events and news in the nursing world on a broader scale.

We do a lot of work, but we also know how to have fun in SNA. For example, we throw parties all the time. Our biggest one this year was the SNA Christmas party held in the basement of West Hall. This was for all nursing students and profs; we had it catered, played a ton of games, sold SNA sweatshirts, and did what we do best - socializing. The officers, Mary Kastrzak, Angie VerSteeg, Eve Tischer, and Jan Mulder, and the other members organize these activities. The freshmen and sophomores especially benefit because they hear scary things about the nursing profession and program here at Trinity (I'm sure you've heard them too). We need to let them know that it really isn't as bad as they've heard.

Well, I hope I have convinced you that you must join the Student Nurses Association when you're here next year. I think you would benefit from what the program has to offer. What better way to get into the nursing profession!

Love,
Cindi

Dear Anne,

Remember when you asked me what goes on at Trinity? Well, all you really need to do to find out is to pick up one of our fabulously fun and informative student publications.

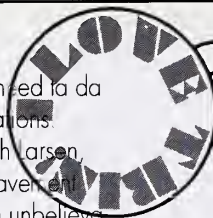

For example, take our student newspaper, The Courier. This year's editor, Josh Larson, did an excellent job of getting out an issue almost every two weeks, a big improvement when compared to last year. He and the layout editor, Tim Hendricksan, put an unbelievable amount of time and effort into getting stories written, laid out, and printed in time for everyone on campus to read. The other students who wrote for the paper also did a good job.

The Courier did its best to keep both faculty and students up to date on current events on campus, the local area, and in the world. It provided thoughtful editorials; concert, movie, and music reviews; and even a little bit of humor in Chris Verstrate's back page articles and the Overheard section.

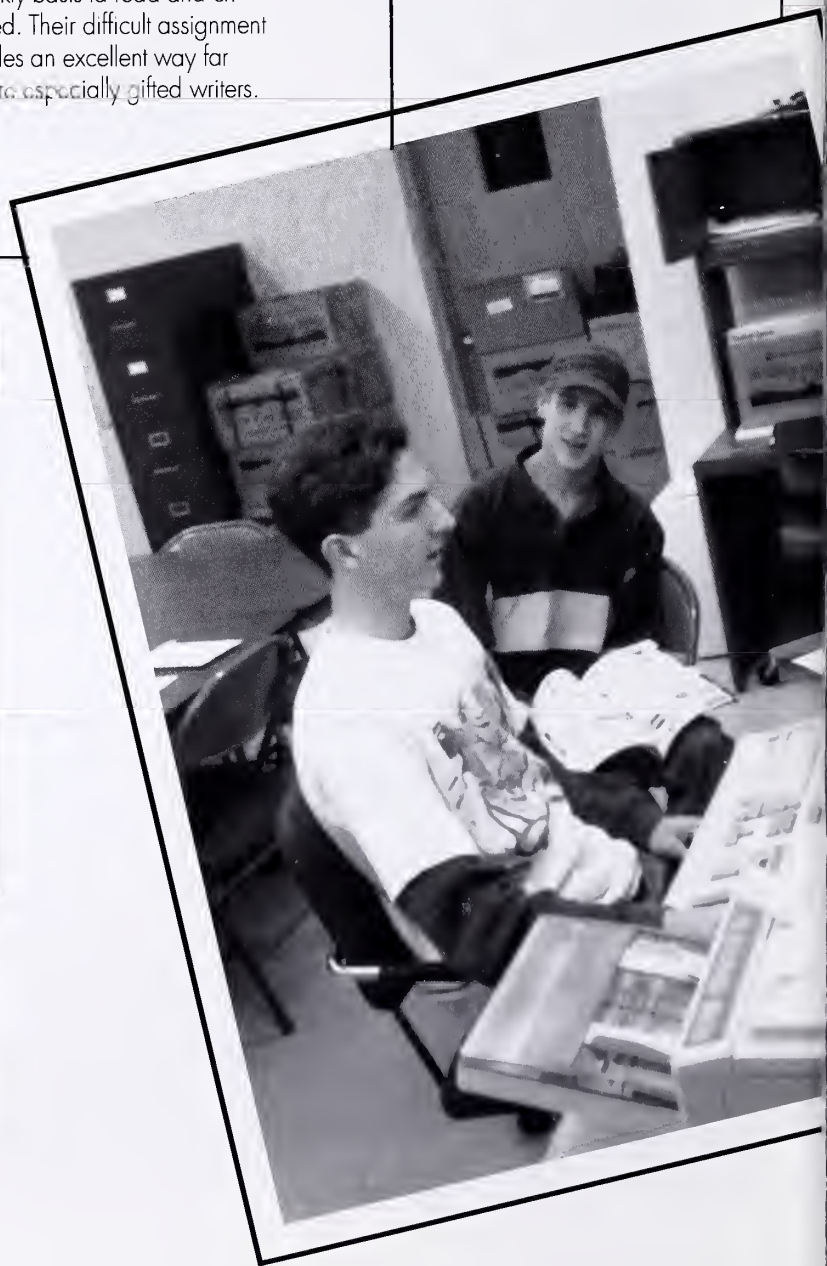

Another one of Trinity's fine publications is the yearbook, Allelu. Rabin Veenstra, who is the editor-in-chief this year, has come up with some very interesting new ideas to replace the same old standby of unimaginative pictures and boring stories. I'll have to show you the finished product when it comes out. The Allelu staff has worked hard all year to achieve the best possible way of recording both the good and bad memories from this school year.

The third of Trinity's publications is The Mirror. It is a compilation of student's writings which is printed and sold for a mere 25 cents in the bookstore. A committee of students and faculty from the English department gets together on a weekly basis to read and critique essays, poetry, and other writings that have been submitted. Their difficult assignment lies in selecting the best articles to be printed. The Mirror provides an excellent way for students and faculty to give recognition to those students who are especially gifted writers.

Mom and Dad,

I love you. I want to make sure you know that. I don't think I tell you that enough.

Last week, on the choir tour, we heard some very bad news. Dave Arsen told us that President Bootsma's wife, Mary Beth Bootsma, was in the hospital. The prognosis was not good. When we returned to campus we found out that she had acute leukemia. The entire campus was upset. In classroom prayers and chapels we prayed for her and the Bootsma family. Yesterday, Mary Beth Bootsma died.

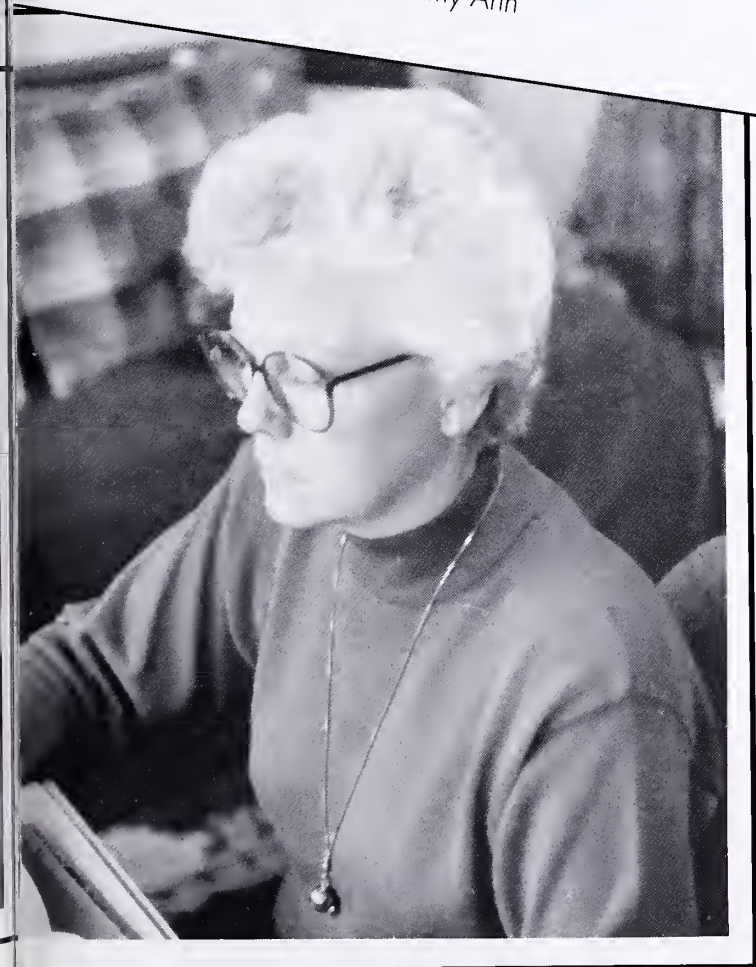

Mom and Dad, it was the most horrible thing. We only found out about her illness seven days ago and now she's gone. Her youngest son is a Trinity student. I can only imagine how hard it is for him and Dr. Bootsma. My profs are very upset. It is easy to see that everyone is emotionally drained and hurting. I can't believe how quickly this happened.

Mrs. Bootsma's illness and death has caused me to think about how precious and tenuous life is. Life really is a gift from God and the fact that my whole family is healthy is a miracle! So many things can go wrong, we just assume they won't. You and I both know deep down that death is a mixed blessing; everyone is comforted by the promise of heaven, but very few are willing to end their earthly life or loose a loved one. I'm sorry I don't have an up beat letter for you, but it's been very traumatic for me. I'm so far away from home and I can't stand the thought of loosing either one of you. So, know that I love you and I can't wait to see you at Thanksgiving.

All my love,

Dear Jesse,
 Wow! I have been incredibly blessed again tonight. I never imagined that unselfishly giving myself would make me feel so good on the inside.
 Our Sociology/Social Work Club organizes these Prison Visits one Saturday a month with the help of Sister Pat from Lutheran Social Services. We take the relatives, mostly children, of some inmates at either Dwight or Dixon Prison to see their loved ones for a two hour visit. The children do not get to see their mothers very often because the prisons are so far away and it is difficult for them to find a ride. Everyone involved is extremely grateful for the ministry we humbly provide. This makes the reality of social work come alive. Not only were the families rewarded last night, I was as well. I thank God for the opportunity to learn about giving. How is your service project going. Write me if you ever get a spare minute.

Love,
 Mary

Dear Mom,

As you know, I belong to Trinity's Sociology Club. I don't think I've told you much about what we've been doing, so I thought I'd fill you in. At our last monthly meeting we had a guest speaker, Mark Gamble, from DCFS. He talked to us about social work as a profession, and shared with us a little about his job. Mom, this was totally fascinating to me! Since Trinity does not have an extensive Social Work curriculum, I felt talking with an actual social worker was very enlightening.

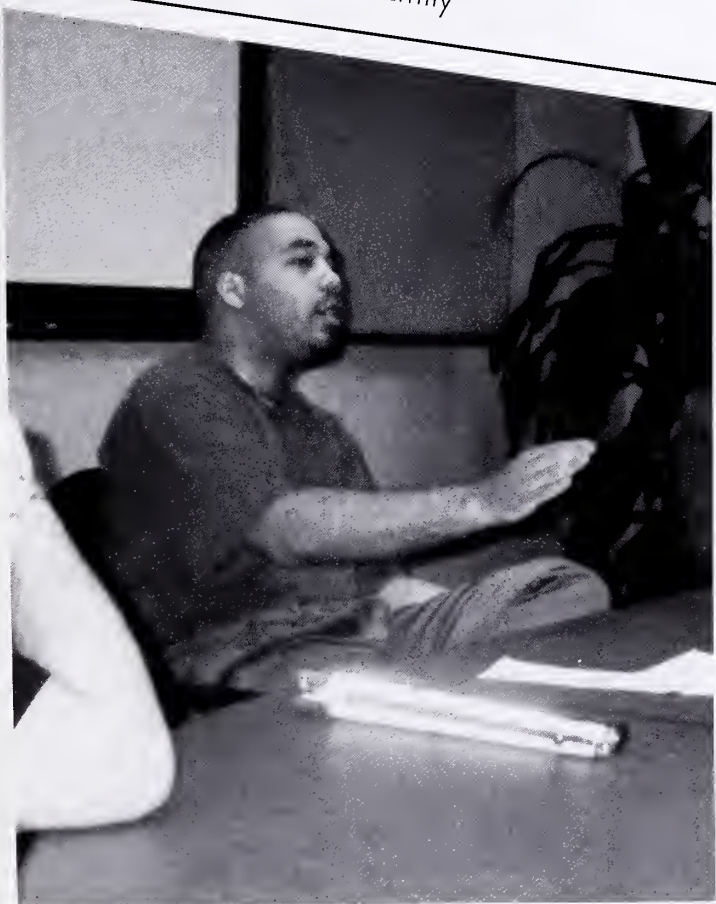

The club also sponsored a trip downtown to the Olive Branch Mission, where we served food to the homeless. It was a wonderful experience - more fun than I imagined! This trip offered an opportunity to put academic work into practice in a real social service setting.

Mom, I have been so rewarded by my involvement with the Soc Club! So often we talk about problems that exist in our world, but we don't do anything about them. God has really shown me how rewarding it is to humble myself and serve others.

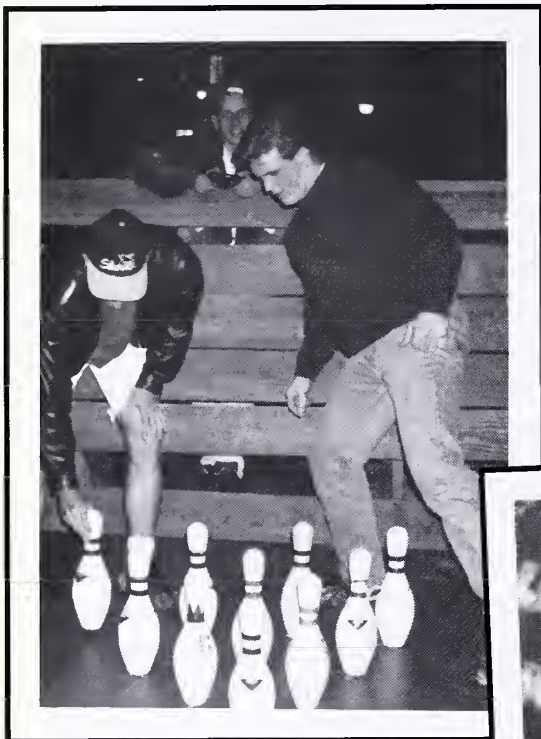

Love you,
Emily

Dear Johnny -

Hey there little brother! You are absolutely going to love it here next year, especially the intramural program. Brad, Suzanne, and the other staff members have done a fabulous job at organizing the various sports this year. Most of the games take place late at night, between 10 and midnight, after I've done enough studying to deserve a break and expend some energy. Of the eleven sports offered this year, I think I participated in at least seven of them: coed sand volleyball, bawling, hocsac (indoor soccer), coed kickball, 4-on-4 coed basketball, 4-an-4 coed volleyball, and 6-an-6 volleyball.

Unfortunately, I was always on a losing team except for 4-an-4 coed basketball (my team of all freshmen made it to the "Final Four") and 4-an-4 volleyball. You would not believe the intense competition surrounding many of these games. Basketball and hocsac were especially fierce. I guess that's what you get when you put too many male egos in a single gym. You'll fit right in!

Intramurals is by far the largest student-drawing activity on campus. The most popular events, which will most likely be back next year, were coed sand volleyball, men's 5-an-5 basketball, coed 4-on-4 volleyball, and hoc-soc.

Seeing the team names was almost as exciting as watching the action. Many team names had to be screened, and many also had inside meanings that sounded ridiculous to the rest of us. "Orea" was a team with black and white members. "We didn't do the Caf" was another creative name that emerged after a cafeteria prank. Let me tell you, intramurals were an important part of my Trinity experience this year. Intramurals helped me get to know a bunch of new people. You really see the true side of people when you're competing with or against them at odd hours of the night.

Love ya,
Kris

Dear Mary,

I haven't seen you around lately (even though you are my roommate!), so I thought I'd take this opportunity to tell you a little bit about what's happening here at Trin.

Last weekend, the Reader's Theater put on a production of "The Best Christmas Pageant Ever." I went to see the Sunday performance. It was excellent. They said it was mainly a children's play, but all of the adults in the audience seemed to like it. Some of the jokes that the kids were too young to understand all of the adults thought were hilarious. The weekend shows were virtual sell-outs; I barely got in to see the performance.

Did you know that Reader's Theater is a one credit class? They put five hours of work in every week, and only get one credit.

Anyway, back to "The Best Christmas Pageant Ever." The actors were very funny. Whitney Gray, Charlena Lockridge, Karen Tysse, Doug Pruim, Tammie Ryken, Pam Parker, Kim Reedy and Tim Wick played a number of roles. They were excellent little kids though. Suzanne Mannes and Art Thompson made a great married couple.

You missed a great play. Well, see you around!
(Yeah, right.)

Dear Anita,

How was your Christmas vacation? Must be nice to have more than a month without school — I only get two short weeks! But then, you don't get Interim.

Along with the usual boring choices like Basket-weaving or Head-dancing (you've got to wonder if you're getting out enough when you do Basket-weaving exciting), there were actually some good choices this year. Many students spend half of December trying to figure out which interim will be least painful. Judging from the list, I am SURE that some of the professors do their best to make sure no one signs up for their interim course. Apparently, they would rather spend the time writing complex academic articles. . . . One professor has the most clever approach, though. He always takes students on the same field trip. People don't give college professors enough credit. They come up with some really clever ways to avoid work.

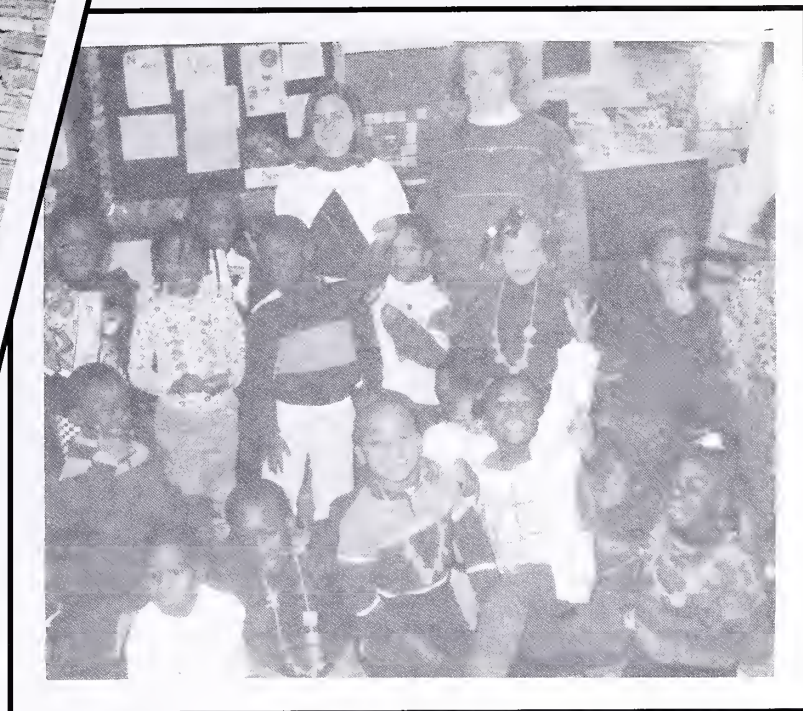

I shouldn't give interim a bum rap, though. Last year I spent interim watching plays all over Chicagoland. I don't think I could have come up with a more entertaining two weeks on my own. This year, some students were lucky enough to actually leave the state — one class went to New Mexico to study the Zuni and Navajo cultures, while another went to California as a recruitment/music ensemble. One group went to work in Chicago's projects, while another group did teacher aiding at Roseland Christian School. Mystery Whodunit, Cross Cultural Cinema, and Environmental Issues in Chicago didn't look too bad, either. All in all, I'm not really sure which I'd rather have: two more weeks of vacation or the chance to travel the country or work in the city for credit.

Dear Laurie,

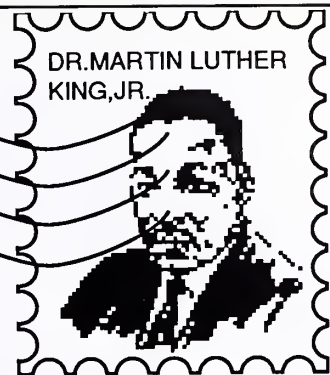

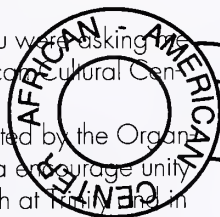

Remember that little room in the Molenhouse Student Center that you were asking me about? Well, I finally found out what's in there. It is the African American Cultural Center; it is a great place to go and learn about other cultures.

It is called the African American Cultural Center because it was started by the Organization for African American Unity in 1991. The Center is supposed to encourage unity among its members and positive relations among different cultures both at Trinity and in the surrounding community through various activities and service projects. In addition to celebrating cultural diversity on Trinity's campus, the Center aims to provide an African American identity on campus. This year they've planned to invite a number of speakers, show movies dealing with culture, race, and ethnic issues, and field trips to the DuSable Museum and the Field Museum.

Much of the efforts of the Center members go toward celebrating African American heritage. This caused some negative reactions within the student body. Although it is not a big an issue as it was a few years ago, many students still resent the existence of the center. That is really too bad. I think that many students could really benefit from the things the Center has to offer. Many Trinity students came from sheltered and homogeneous towns. Some students are prejudiced negatively toward other traditions. Personally, I am glad Trinity at least offers students a place to celebrate cultural diversity in God's kingdom, but I wish others would see it that way.

Guess we'll have to give it time. Hey, next time you came to visit me, maybe I can take you there. I think you'd like it. See you Spring Break!

Love ya,
Jessie

Dear Uncle Eddie,

Sorry I haven't written in so long, but it's been kind of a rough season. I went and joined Trinity's basketball team just to make you proud (although the transition from Springfield High Wildcat to Trinity Troll was more humbling than even the name suggests).

I wanted to make a good impression on Coach Fitzgerald, so for the first couple of games I tried shooting three-pointers, like Jac Klinger and Ryan Schaafsma. The only problem was that I tended to misjudge the distance to the rim, so most of my shots became airballs.

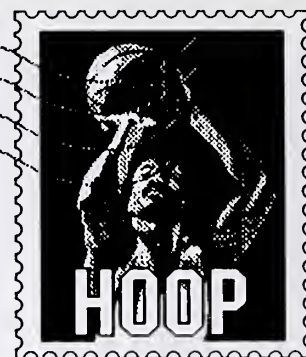

I also tried to do a high-flying, death-defying, in-your-face, 360 degree slam dunk like Darius Young. He's only a freshman too, so I figured whatever he could do, I could do, right? Wrong. Somewhere along the way my 360 became about 720, and the "in-your-face" became an "on-my-butt."

I wanted to be as good a shot-blocker as Darius, Layne, and Kevin "I'm Tall" Sol, but since I'm only 5'5 3/4" I should have known it was a bad idea from the start.

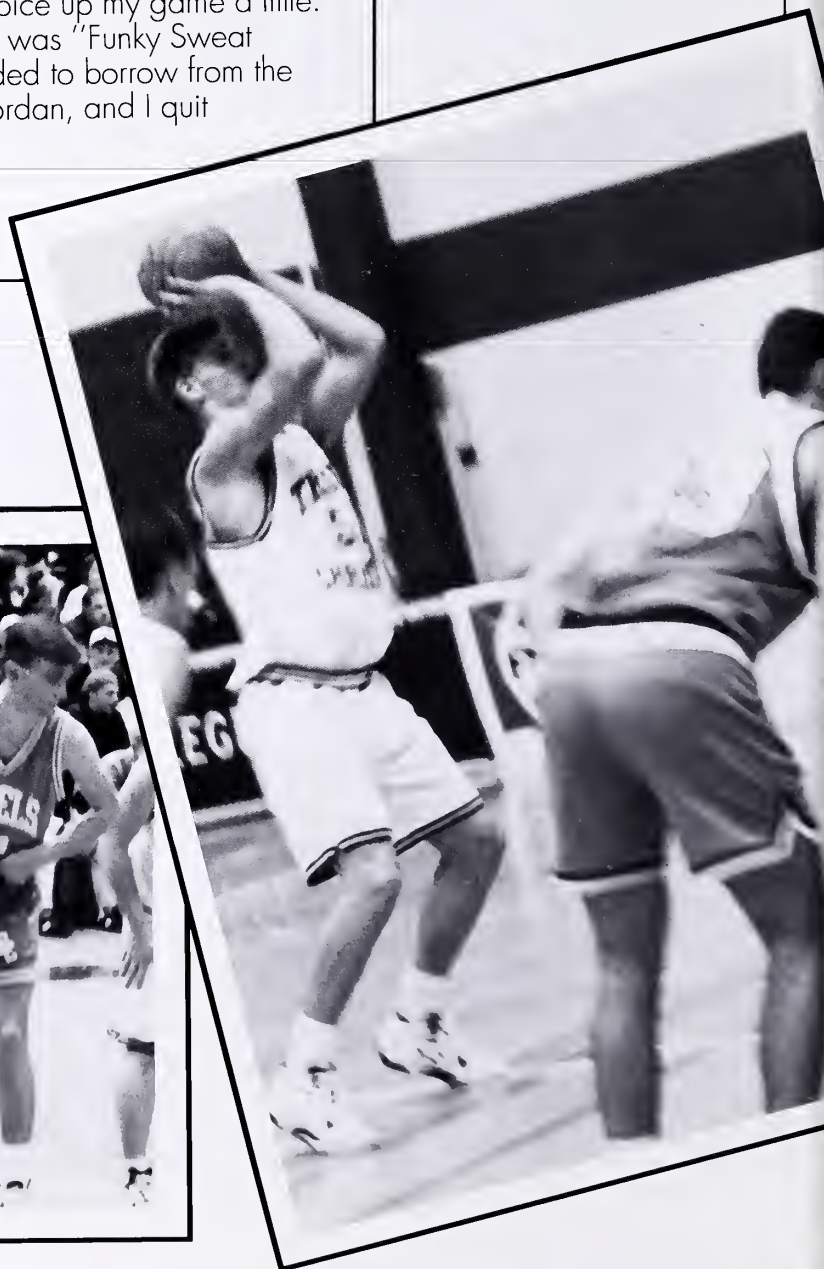

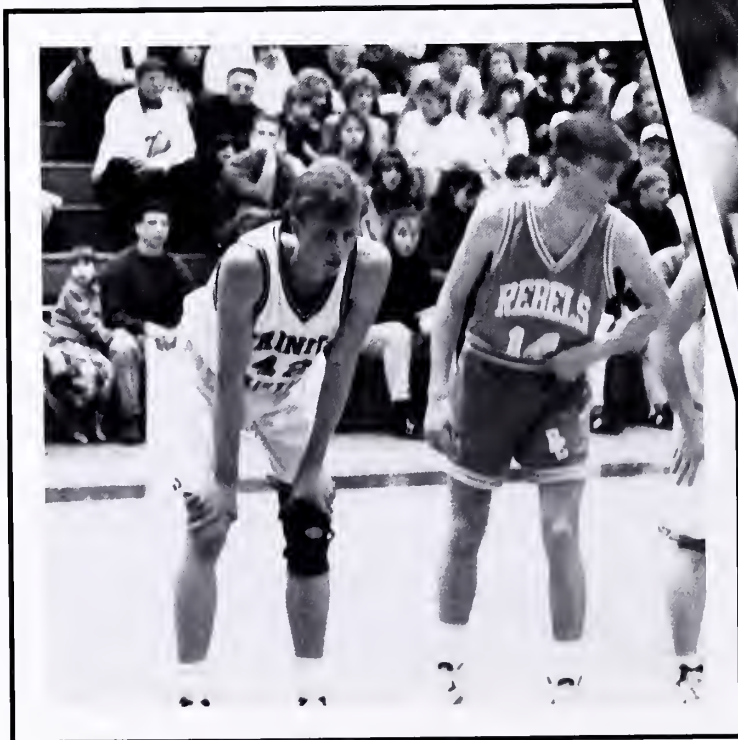

So, I thought if maybe I had a cool nickname like Jac "Piece" Klinger, or Corey "Total Package" Van Buren, it might spice up my game a little. But the best the guys could come up with for me was "Funky Sweat Sock," and that seemed a little long. So, I decided to borrow from the greatest basketball player of all time, Michael Jordan, and I quit the team. Maybe I'll try again next year.

Dear Mom,

We finally won! After our six game losing streak, so good to have a victory. In pre-game devotions before the game against Purdue Calumet, Kim talked about Peter and how he had a good attitude and praised God even when things weren't going his way, and basketball season definitely wasn't going our way. Kim's trademark enthusiasm was the spark we needed, and we stormed out, with our theme cry of "Peter," and kicked Purdue Calumet's butt! This is going to turn our whole season around you'll see. We've already won another game since then, and we're improving on our 5-13 record. Gotta go to practice so we can be ready to do it again.

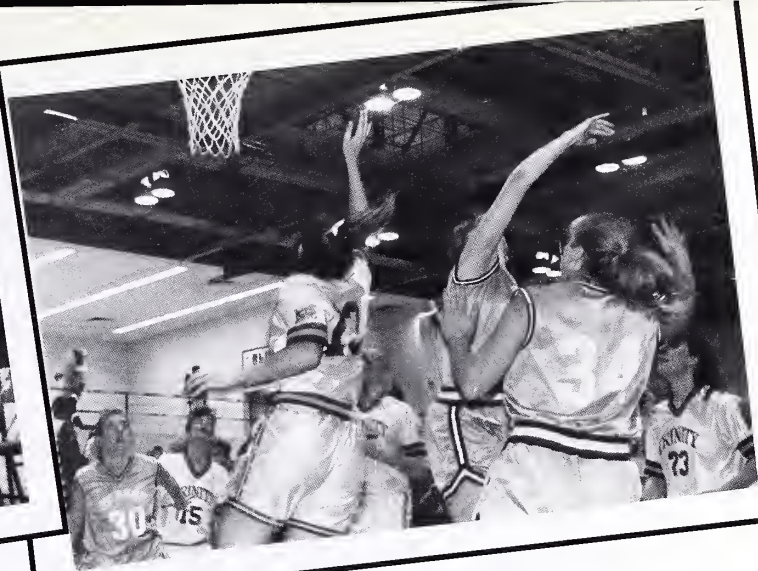

Love ya,

Dear Mom,

Last time I wrote we had just started our big turnaround, including an amazing winning streak. More good news we ended our season with an 11-15 record! We finished with a loss to Eureka College in the first round of the NAIA tournament, but we gave it our all. We weren't allowed to play in the NCCAA tournament, the tournament where we could have done some damage, because of some silly school rule made when we were in our slump - we didn't have a .500 record at the season's close so we couldn't go, though our playing was at its best. Hopefully they'll re-evaluate that rule. the NCCAA tourney would've provided a unique and special experience.

Although we lose Kim and Gina, next year we should have the chance for post-season play. Kim, Keri, and Shari all had all conference honors; Shari and Kim were all district NCCAA; and Kim was all America NCCAA. Pretty impressive, huh? Maybe next year my name will be on the list!

Dear Becky,

What's up? As usual, nothing's really going on here at Trinity. Besides homework (of course), the only thing to do at night is bundle up and walk down to the gym to watch the guys volleyball team.

While their record isn't anything to brag about—out of all their games, they've only won about two—it's still inspiring to watch a bunch of guys in uniforms get all sweaty hitting a volleyball around the court. This is only the second year Trinity's had a men's volleyball team, but some of the guys seem really into the whole thing. But then again, so are some of the spectators.

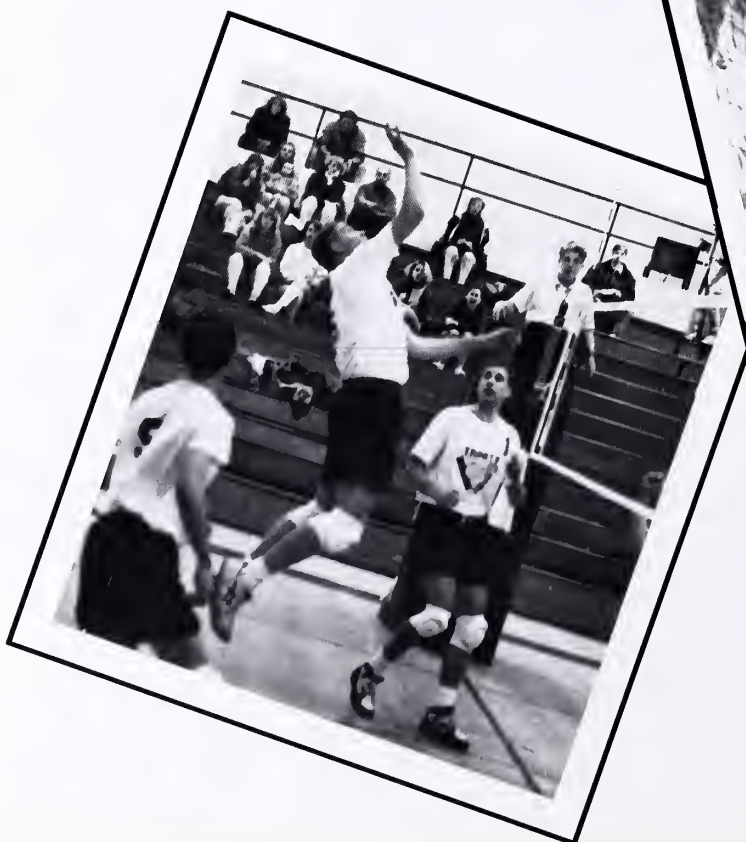

I went to a game last night, even though I had an A & P midterm the next day, and I must say I was impressed with the team's ability. Mark Van Assen is the only senior on the team and his experience really shows in the games. Dave DeBlecourt has a great serve and Darl Vander Meulen's spikes are very powerful. Tom DeJong sets for the team; it's his first year and he does rather well. Most of the team are underclassmen and they look like they have fun. I know I do watching them!

Later.

Dear Christina,

How are you? I just wanted to drop a quick note and update you on another one of Trinity's exciting new features . . . chapel. Remember the rather boring chapel schedule we had last semester . . . Monday prayer . . . Wednesday speaker . . . Friday singing? Well, recently a bit of a twist has been added to the routine by our new chaplain, Dr. Sam Hamstra. The change has made a definite improvement in chapel attendance and I think even in the attitude of those present. Personally, I end up sleeping through it much less. It's exciting to see how we will be worshipping. Students are more and more involved in chapel this year. We have two student interns, Heather Boeck and Tim Gibbons. Dr. Hamstra is working on forming a chapel praise team.

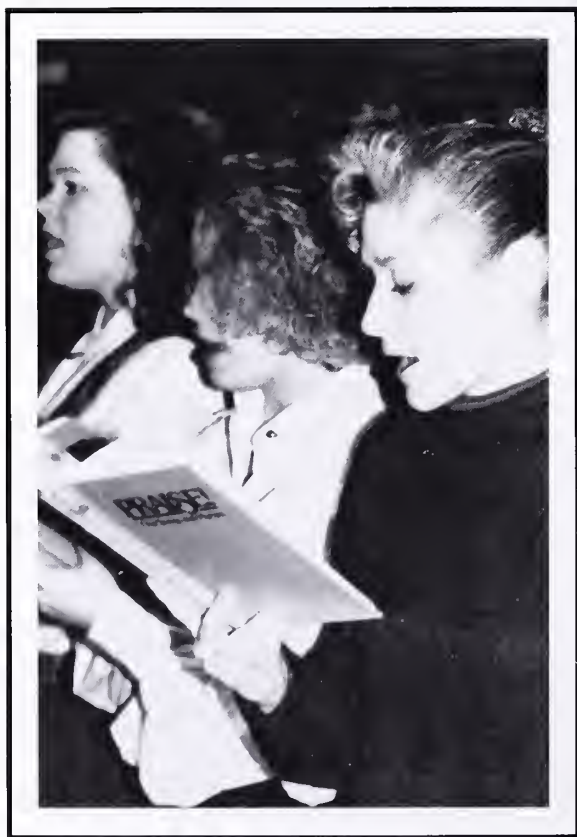

One particular chapel that stands out in my mind was when Dave and Jodi Van Kley led our worship service. They sang a number of contemporary Christian songs together.

Another chapel reminded me a lot of you. When the director of Camp Manitouqua came, we opened the chapel with a sing-along of camp songs. What memories that brought back! I miss you!

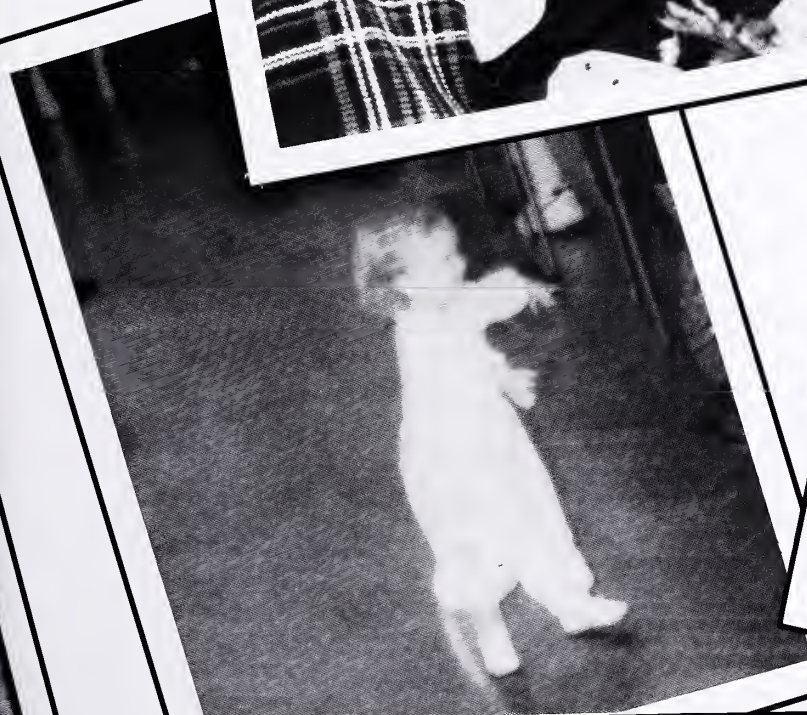

Love in Him,
Laura

Dear Karen,

How's life? The fall formal you had last weekend sounded incredible. Here at Trinity we had a little dance of our own. It was definitely not a formal. The weekend of Halloween our Student Activities Committee sponsored a costume dance down at the gym. They decorated it with hay bales, an inflatable "dead" body floating in a wading pool, random balloons, and lots of blacklight.

The costume variety was great. We had everything from Trekkies to Aladdin—complete with monkey—to guys dressed in drag (and let me tell you, some of them liked their new look a little too much).

The D.J. played all the usual corny Halloween music—you know, "The Monster Mash", "Elvira", etc—plus way too much country music for my liking. I'm sorry, but line dancing is out of control at Trinity, and if it gets much worse I'm going to have to transfer!

We also had a lip-synching contest. However, there were only three acts. Some seniors wearing masking tape on their heads and playing air guitar to some Metallica song beat a hilarious rendition of a Brady Bunch song—you know, that song from the episode when Peter's voice is changing? Despite the poor judging, I had fun.

See ya soon,
Vern

Dear Debbie,

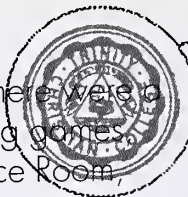

I wish you could have been here for Homecoming. There were a lot of things going on—basketball, tennis, and ping-pong games, an address by Dr. James Skillen in the Alumni Conference Room, and my personal favorite, the talent show.

The first group was "Sha-No-No" - a bunch of male alumni "rockin'" to the 50's. You would have gotten a kick out of it.

Next, Reader's Theater did a skit called "Joan 'N' the Whale", one about Jesus telling Peter to walk on the water, and one about letting your light shine. I was impressed.

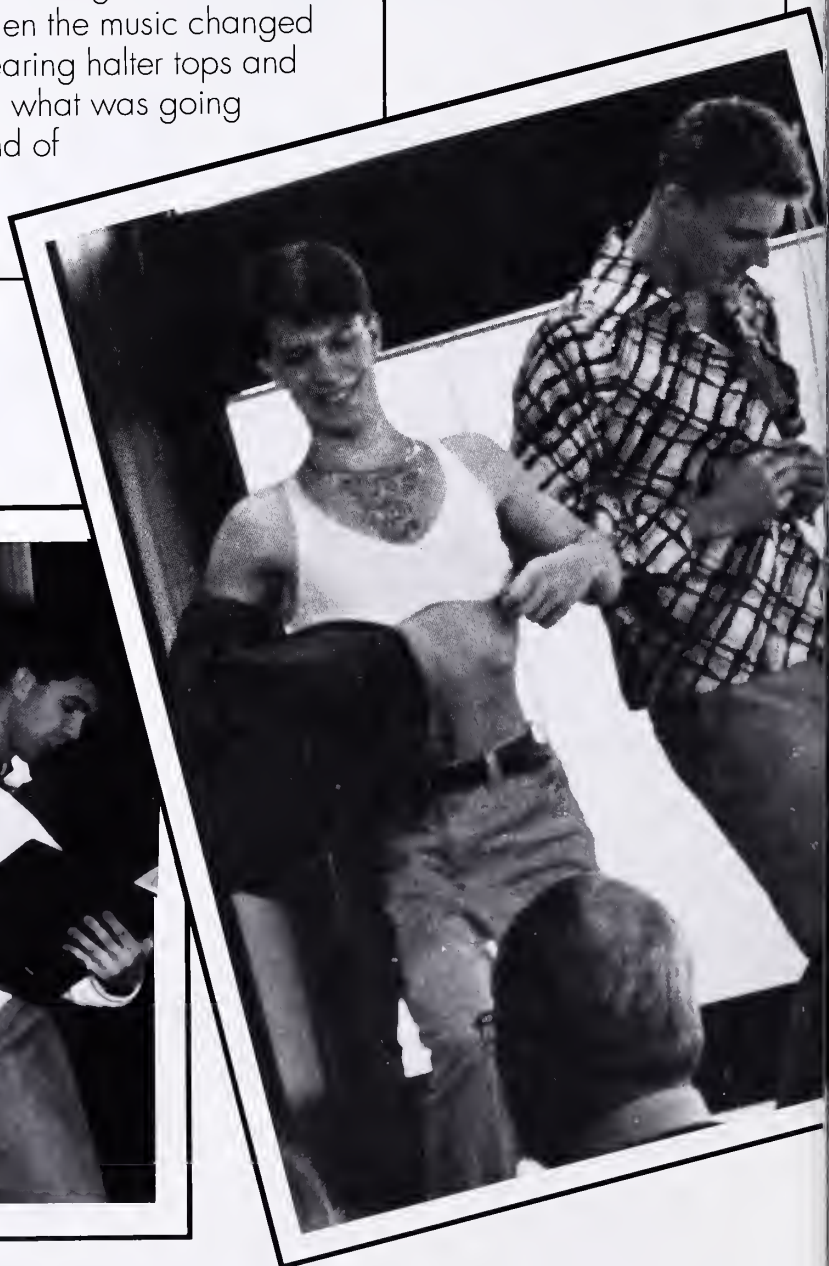

The last thing on the program was a pseudo-strip tease. Dan Loerop, Gary Ericks, Justin Sealy, and Jeff Weidenaar first came in dressed all in black to the sound of galloping horse - two of them pretending to be horses while the other two were riders. When the music changed, they took off their black outfits to reveal disco outfits that they were wearing underneath. They "boogied" to some classic Saturday Night Fever music, and when the music changed again they danced to "The Nutcracker" wearing halter tops and tutus. By this time, everyone was wondering what was going to come off next. Thankfully, that was the end of the show. Take care.

Love,
Clarissa

Dear Joel,

You should have been there. I know you only spent two years at Trinity and you're not sure if you're an alum or not, but you are. What you hold important about your two years at Trinity is what has been celebrated at the last few Homecomings: the desire to transform hearts and culture, society and individual lives. This year John Bernbaum, a Trinity alum and one of the Christian College Coalition administrators, spoke to us about bringing the gospel to Russia and finding parables for the West in his work in the East. James Skillen, head of Citizens for Public Justice, spoke in the afternoon about the need for a Christian political imagination.

I think it's been four years now since Dorothy Huisman and the Alumni Board decided alums might like to mix entertainment and education at Homecoming. So in addition to talent shows, tennis and ping-pong tournaments, basketball games, and evening entertainment, we've designed a festive symposium over the dinner hour, a kind of movable feast called "stroll through the library." It includes drama, music, an update in missions and social services, and presentations that reflect Trinity's desire to transform hearts and culture. Attendance over these last few years has quadrupled from what it was in the earlier "entertainment only" homecomings! Ward must be getting out.

It seems to me, if you get two or three Trinity alums together, they know how to have a good time in Christ. The fellowship during dinner, dessert and program reaffirmed that Trinity has always been, for me, the best down-to-earth "communion of the saints." And I guess Trinity alums are still excited about instilling a personal piety and a cultural assertiveness in the minds and lives of young Christians. I think you would still fit right in. So give us a call next year. Maybe we can do Homecoming together.

Yours in Christ,
Mark

Dear Adam,

That's great that you made the golf team. I personally hate golf—dragging those heavy clubs around, baking in the sun while you look for your lost ball in the sand traps—it's just not for me.

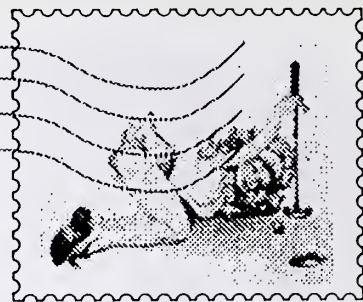

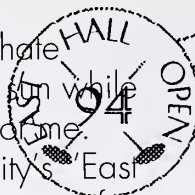

The closest I've come to playing golf lately was at Trinity's "East Hall Open". Every year, East Hall sponsors a strange version of miniature golf. Each suite sets up a mini-golf course and then people pay to play through these little obstacle courses.

There were some pretty bizarre ones. We were hitting the ball under couches, into toilets, over ramps and even in to a cardboard cut-out of Elvira's mouth. The best was the RD's—Jeff and Jean Fennema's—you had to hit an inflatable beach ball into a wading pool.

The best use of a natural disaster award would have to go to Amy Oftedahl for East Suite 34. Remember how when it was freezing cold last month and we had pipes breaking all over campus? Suite 34 was the suite that flooded. For the Open, the suite was decorated with construction paper fish, blue streamers and lots of blue lights to give the room an underwater feeling.

Well, good luck with your golf game!

Love,
Eve

Dear Dad,

You should have been there last night. It was so cool. The Thirty-fifth Anniversary Celebration at Orchestra Hall was awesome. Dr. Sam Homstro, our new chaplain, started it off with a welcome and prayer. Dr. Bootsma said that we were there to celebrate growth."

After those two spoke, the wind ensemble played a few songs. I didn't know they were so good! We all then stood and sang "From All That Dwell Below the Skies." After that, Harold Clousing, who graduated in '63, sang a few songs about following the leading of the Lord. The Honors Ensemble helped him out on the last song. Afterwards the Concert Choir sang. They were really good. I could hardly see individual people where I was sitting, but I could recognize a few.

The first group after intermission was the West Coast Tour Ensemble. They sang some of my favorite songs. After them was Dr. Joel Nederhood. He spoke on the idea of "His Plans and Ours" based on Jer. 29:11. He reminded us that no matter what plans we might have for our lives, we need to surrender our wills to God to see what he can do. Afterwards the Community Chorale and the Concert Choir sang John Rutter's "Gloria." The brass ensemble that accompanied us had many professional players, and was quite good.

It was a night that really made me thankful for the opportunity to attend a Christian college. I had a great view from the stage of Orchestra Hall and as I looked around, I occurred to me that all the people in the hall were supporters of Trinity. It was a real joy to celebrate Trinity with many generations of supporters, I really feel like I am part of an elite group of Christians - Trinity students.

Love,
Troy

Dear Carolyn,

How are you surviving these lost few hellish weeks before Spring Break? I swear, it seems like all the professors on Trinity's campus have gotten together in some secret alliance to punish us poor, tormented students to the extreme. I have more papers and exams than I ever thought possible all due in the next three weeks. When I look over my schedule, I have at least one exam or paper due every day. What's with that? The only thing that is keeping me sane is the promise of Spring Break.

Ah, yes, Spring Break. That bottle of ice cold Gatorade in the Sahara. What we are going to do, anyway? A lot of people from Trinity have been saving up to rent a condo somewhere warm, like Gulf Shores or Panama City. What could possibly sound better than an entire week of lounging around on a beach, swimming in the ocean, and working on your tan with the rest of the CRC?

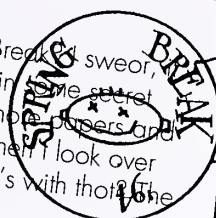

Quite a few people here have already started working on their tans most of the tanning beds around here are booked solid for weeks. Fokers.

Other people I've talked to are getting really excited about going home for Spring Break. For some people, this will be their first chance to see Mom and Dad since Christmas. They're also excited about seeing those friends that they've only been able to write to or call for months.

And, of course, some people are planning on spending their break working. Not always the most fun option, but definitely the most practical. They'll be making money while the rest of us will be spending it.

Hey, even if I was doing nothing special for Spring Break, it would still be better than classes. Just the idea of a whole week with absolutely nothing to do sends shivers down my spine.

Dear Rachel,

Today was Grandparent's Day. I think that the grandparents that came had fun, but unfortunately mine couldn't come. For me it was just a normal day, but for some of my friends it was great. They got out of some of their classes just to act as guides for their grandparents. I wish mine could have come, but since it was on a Wednesday, and since they work, they couldn't. If it had been on the weekend, there might have been a chance that they could have come. But as it was, they would have had to be off of work for at least two days to be able to travel out here. It must be nice to have grandparents that live near campus.

The first thing that the grandparents did when they arrived around 9:00 or 9:30 in the morning was to have punch and cookies for a snack. Isn't that just the best thing for them to do? Then they went to a very long chapel. Almost every vocal and instrumental group performed for them. I'm not sure exactly how long it took, but everyone that I talked to about it said that it was really, really long. They were twenty minutes late for their lunch in the West Hall basement (it's not as bad as it sounds). After lunch, the grandparents were free to explore with the guidance of their grandchild.

From what I could see, they caused very little disturbance here on campus. I think that this is a very good way for the grandparents to get more involved in the lives of their grandchildren. For those that had grandparents come, it was an enjoyable time, a time to forget about all the work that had to be done and just spend time with family.

See ya,

Hi Everyone!

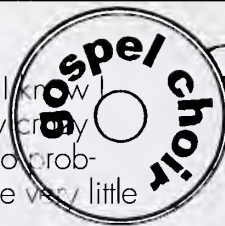

How are you doing? I'm great. School's going fine. I know I promised I would write right away, but things are pretty crazy around here. I thought my second semester would be no problem, but I was wrong. College work is tough and I have very little free time.

I realized that I never told you about Gospel Choir. My friend, Gwen Brooks, talked me into joining the Gospel Choir and I really like it. A lot of my friends joined, too. At first it was hard to sing with them, I am so used to classical vocal performance, but it's no problem now.

The conductor's name is John Jeffries. We sing songs from hymn books and gospel songs. We're going to give a concert at Chicago Christian High School. We've already sung in a couple of churches in the area and at some of Trinity's chapels. Our final concert is going to be at Trinity. We will sing with three other choirs. It should be a good concert. I wish you could come to hear the choir, but that's kind of a long trip to make for a gospel concert.

I was really surprised at the variety of cultures in the choir. The choir is not all black like at home. It's different. Don't worry though, everyone gets along and we have a great time. I hope things are going well with all of you. Write soon!

Dear Debbie,

Last night was the last band concert of the year. It was awesome. Our director, Ken Austin puts a lot of hard work into these concerts and deserves a lot of credit for making our Wind, Brass and String Ensembles what they are today. He's crazy; he does his best to get us excited about music. I think you'll really enjoy his style. Although his jokes are kind of painful.

The first group on the agenda was the Brass Ensemble. They played a variety of music, ranging from classical to twentieth century jazz. The Brass Ensemble has had a very busy year. They performed at many churches, schools, and community events, as well as Trinity events - Homecoming, Grandparent's Day, and of course, the Anniversary Celebration at Orchestra Hall. They are looking forward to the possibility of having their own interim course next year.

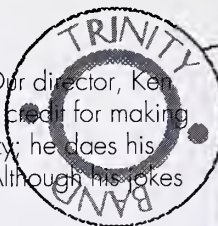

The next group on the program was the flute quartet. Although you could hear each individual flute, they also blended to make a beautiful sound. This group is not quite as active as the Brass Ensemble, but it just got started this year.

The strings were next. The music from these instruments, violin, viola, cello, and bass, surely reached to Heaven. The music they played was beautiful. The strings played in several chapels and occasionally accompany the choir.

The last thing on the agenda was the entire Wind Ensemble. There must be at least forty instrumentalists in the group. Our band plays mostly twentieth century music. This year we played at parades, fairs, schools, and at Trinity events.

Trinity's instrumental music department is really growing. They, like the choir, don't really fit in the music building anymore. I guess that's a good problem. Anyway, it's exciting to see growth in the music department here. Can't wait 'till you can play with us next year!

RE: The judging of the Opus entries

All of the entries this year were so good, it was hard to decide which to put in the show. The main problem was that there were so many of them! Two girls in particular, Andrea and Janelle, seemed a little overzealous to me. Combined, they accounted for nearly half of the total entries! Since it was all such great work, I decided to save myself some time and a real headache by trying the "eenie, meenie, minie, moe" method; but that didn't seem very fair. Then I thought about closing my eyes and grabbing a few pieces blindly, but I nixed that idea too. I ended up going over every piece, just like you wanted. Here are my selections:

GRAPHIC DESIGN

2nd Place: Joe De Young for designing a new logo for McDonald's Corp.; apparently Joe feels that the golden arches have worn out their welcome.
1st place: Goes to Andrea Del Balso for an untitled piece in which she wove together all 179 pages of her Vogue magazine.

PHOTOGRAPHY

SCULPTURE

1st place: Goes to Rich Boomker for another cardboard piece entitled Mountain. I did not like the piece much until I realized it was actually tumbling down. That was really great.

PAINTING

2nd place: Goes to Jim Kamphuis for his portrait of John Bakker wearing pink lingerie. John, Harold Washington was a raisin compared to you.
1st place: Goes to Janelle Licht for a very colorful piece she calls Bellybutton Lint.

My favorite entry is an untitled piece by an unknown artist, composed of some unidentified substance. In fact, I can't even tell what it's supposed to be. Since I wasn't sure what category it fell under, I just gave it BEST OF SHOW honors and left it at that.

Dear Joan,

How's school going for you? My schedule is really full these days, especially now that softball season has started again. I don't mind being busy though, because I'm having so much fun. How's track going for you? Have you qualified for nationals yet? How's things with your coach? Still tense?

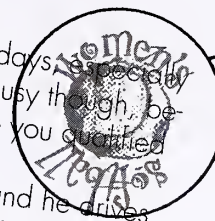

Our coach Dan Bantin is really great. He lives in Wisconsin, and he drives almost two hours to get here for our practices. Talk about dedication. He's a retired police officer, and this is his second year of coaching at Trinity. Our team captains are Kim Pothoven and Abby Vezina, and they are doing a great job of keeping the rest of us motivated and in the game.

Our softball team was lucky enough to go to Florida over the break, we had a great time. We played a lot of games against teams from all over the country. Plus, the weather was beautiful so we could work on our tans (sock lines to be more accurate). We spent one day at Universal Studios. It was so much fun being there with the team. (Much more fun that it was with my family!)

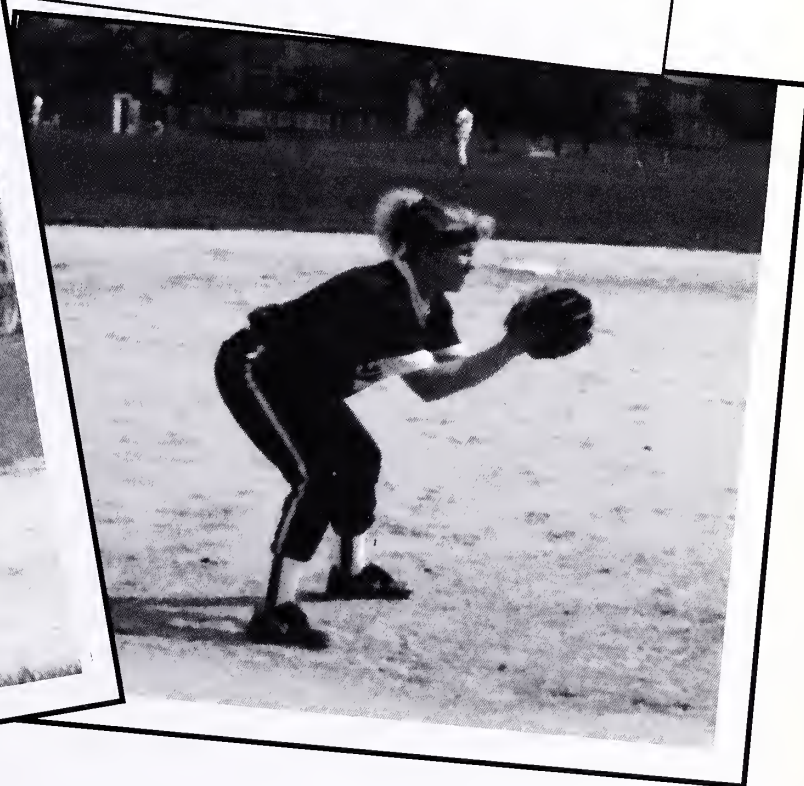

Luckily, the weather has been good for our playing season, too. Only one game was rained out this year, which is amazing when you think about all the games that were called off last year! Our season ended with a pretty decent record. We won 12 games and lost about 30. Our team really improved over the past season, and next year should be even better since most of the team is sophomores and freshmen.

I hope things are working out (no pun intended) for you. What are your plans for the summer?

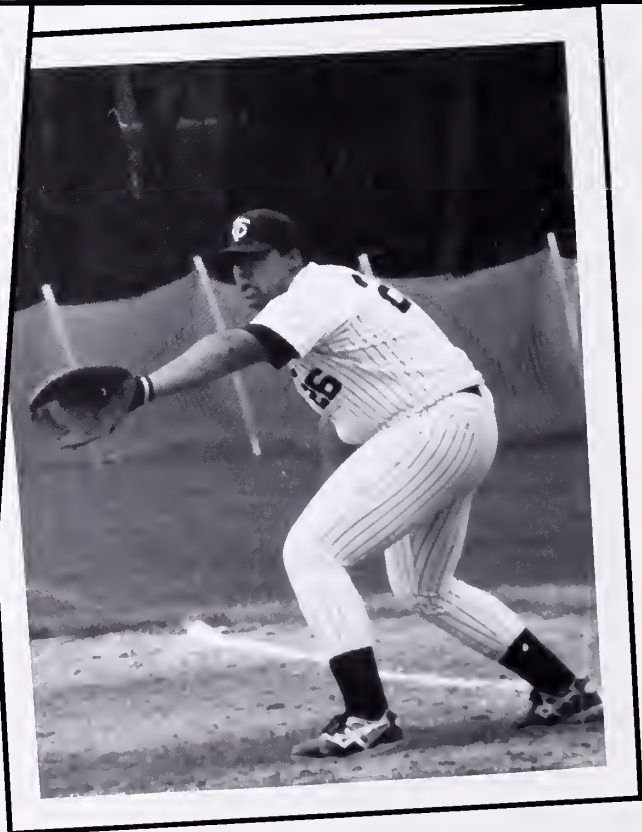

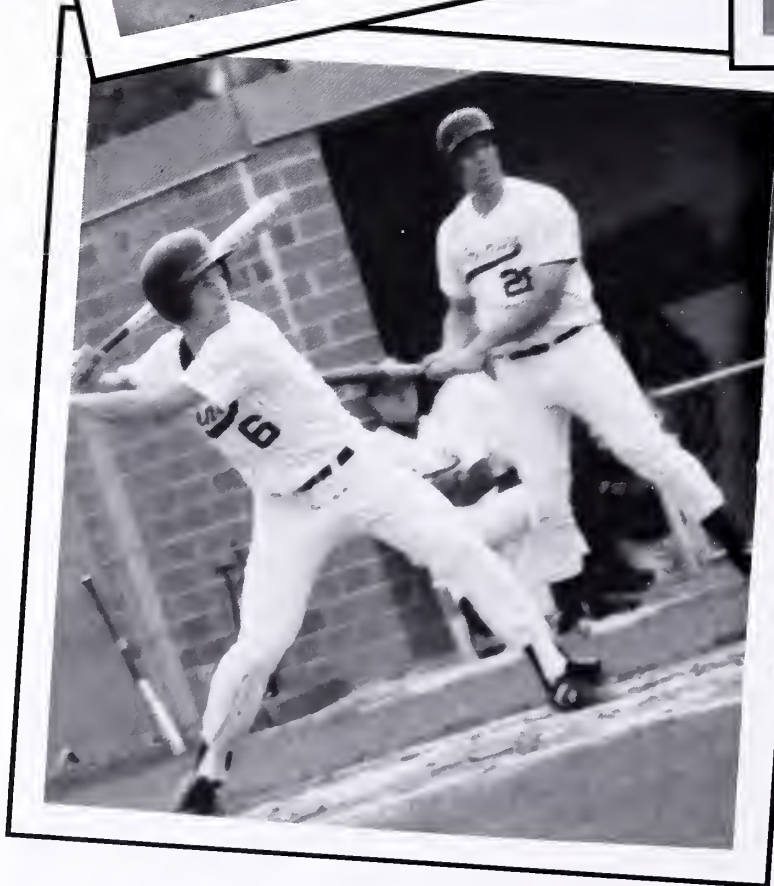

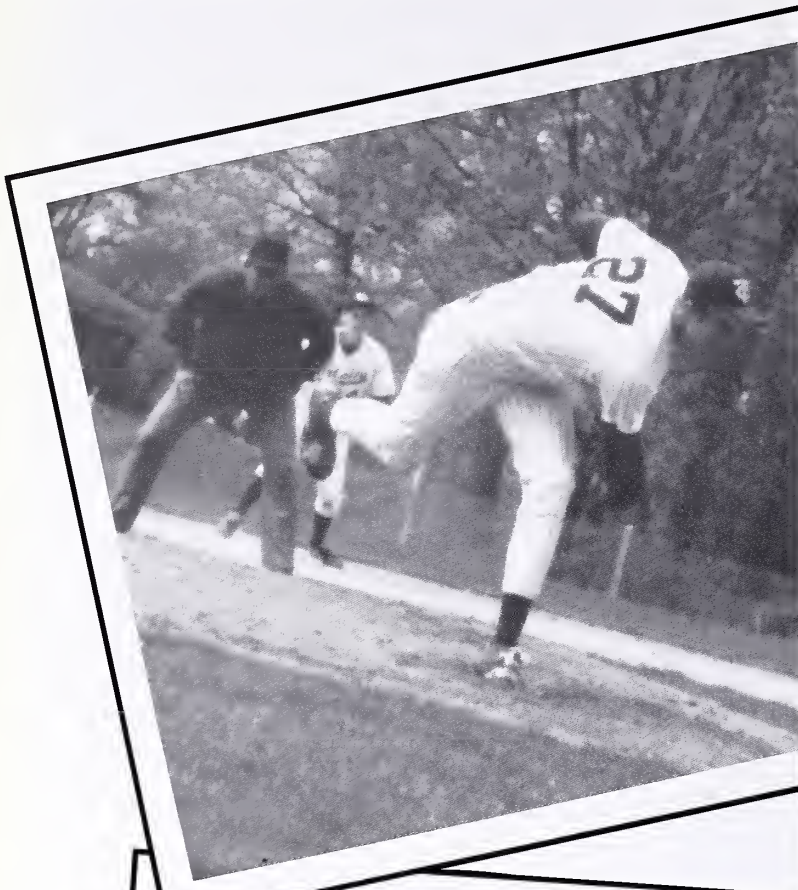

See you soon,
Tammy

Dad,

It was a typical afternoon for the Trinity Trails' baseball squad yesterday. Already heavily favored to surpass last season's record win total, this team is supported by the solid pitching of Brad Ericks, Kevin Kusinsky, and Chris O'Neil; the heavy hitting of Bobby Schaaf, Steve Schulz, and Dustin "Busty" Haekstra. We played our arch-rival, St. Xavier, and beat them 5-4.

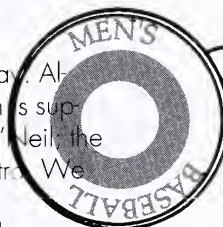

Since you couldn't make it to this game, I thought I'd give you a run down on the action. Bottom 1st Senior All-American Bob Schaaf became the first player in NAIA history to bat for the cycle - in the same inning giving us an early lead, 56-0. St. Xavier used up its entire pitching staff, as well as the team mascot, before it was discovered that the shortstop's bat was filled almost entirely with foam rubber. Schaaf was ejected and the inning had to be replayed.

Bottom 4th Outfielder Dustin Hoekstra, entering the game as the team leader in RBIs, came to bat with runners at the corners and two outs, and proceeded to hit an O-2 pitch into the trees beyond the centerfield fence. Then, to the bewilderment of all, he began to circle the bases with his pants around his ankles, screaming, "Bring back Father Pat!"

Top 7th After Jeff Robinson beamed his third batter in the inning with his infamous "underhand pitch", a bench-clearing brawl ensued, though it wasn't until one pitch later, and it was the not the apposition who rushed to pummel Robinson. It began when Robinson's very next pitch was promptly deposited over the leftfield fence for a grand slam, giving the Cougars a 4-3 lead. Robinson managed to escape, and has reportedly fled the state.

Bottom 9th Senior Steve Schulz and freshman Joe Pfeiffer, who currently share the team lead in home runs, hit back-to-back dingers pulling out another victory for the Trails.

You missed a good one Dad.

Dear Alica,

How are things in Japan? Is the project going well? Usually I write about TCC news, but I thought you might enjoy national current events for a change.

President Bill Clinton began his term and is promising to reinvent government. In September 1993, Clinton promised $108 billion in savings by the century's end. Thousands of federal employees will be phased out to meet this goal. Hillary Clinton, a.k.a. President Clinton, wants to reform the U.S. health care system, including expanding Medicare to cover all Americans.

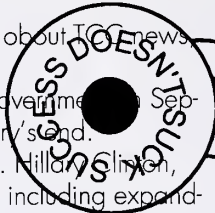

Athletes are always hot topics. This year, Nancy Kerrigan and Michael Jordan are the talk. Kerrigan, the U.S. figure skater, was attacked. A man hit her on the leg with a club or metal bar. Tonya Harding, Kerrigan's rival, is suspected of being involved in the attack, and Harding's body guard, Eckhardt, and her ex-husband, Gillooly, were arrested. The retirement announcement of basketball great Michael Jordan in October was the biggest Chicago sports news in a long time. Jordan led the NBA in scoring the last seven years, and is undeniably the world's best basketball player. Currently, he is trying to earn a place on the Chicago White Sox.

"Seinfeld," the TV show, is the big hit this year in entertainment. "Seinfeld" features the outrageous misadventures of the comedian and his friends; at 8:00 p.m. on Thursdays everything stops and the TVs go on for Seinfeld.

Although country music and country line dancing is sweeping the nation, grunge rock is not dead. At the MTV Video Awards in the fall Nirvana actually won an award. At first I was amazed that they showed up to accept the award, but then Kurt Cobain tried to moon the camera! Last week Cobain was found dead in his house. He shot himself in the head. A sad situation for the alternative rock world.

I hope that brings you up to date with life in the states.

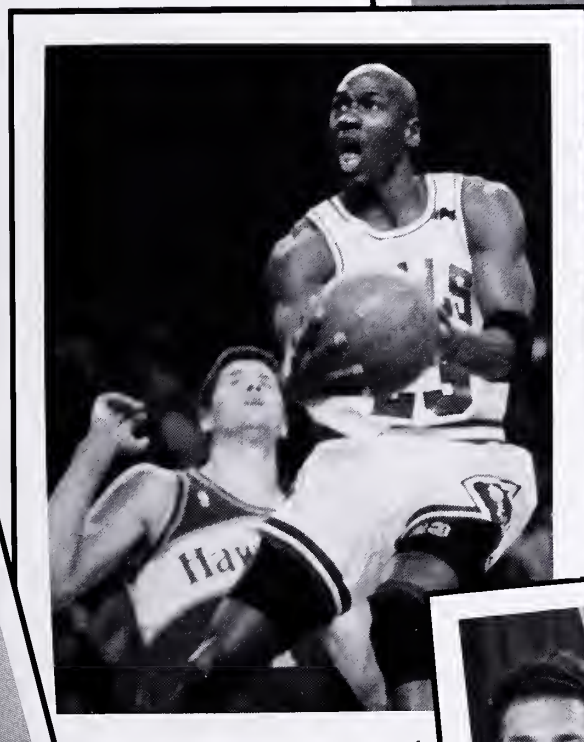

Take care,
Jock

Dear Grandma,

Sa haw is sauthern Califarnia? I'm sa glad schaal is almost aver - I can't wait to come visit! Hapefully you wan't have any mare earthquakes ar fires when I come to see you. I shouldn't facus an Califarnia, there were disasters and problems all over the cauntry. Last fall there was that train crash in Alabama. Can you imagine what it would be like ta be trapped in a submerged train car, sinking in a swamp crawling with snakes and alligatars?

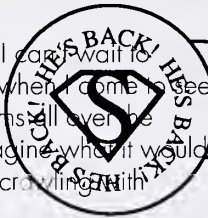

Oh, and then there was the Midwest flood. Same af my friends fram Iowa tell harrar staries about the thousands af people whose hames were flooded ar people who couldn't ga anywhere because the raads were washed aut.

Then there were the problems in Califarnia that you had ta deal with. I was laaking thraugh ald newspapers far a journalism class and I ran across and article about the fire. Did you know that there was at least $1 billion in damage? I guess almost 1,150 hames were destrayed and nearly 200 people were injured. Whaa!

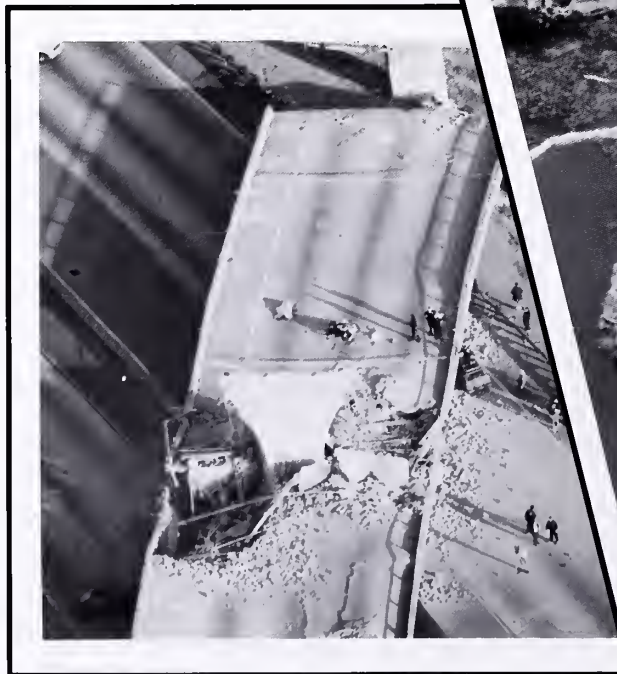

You'd think the fires would wipe aut everything in Califarnia, but the earthquakes taak care af what was left I guess. Daesn't it scare you that there are sa many problems in Califarnia? I'm just afraid that sameday you're going ta have ta rebuild your awn hame instead af valunteering ta help ather people rebuild theirs. You have ta admit that in the 22 years you've lived there you have been blessed!

But while you were having earthquakes and wildfires, we were experiencing cold snaps. All across the Midwest we had the coldest weather in decades. With the wind chill, it was down ta 70 ar 80 degrees below zera at times. Lats af colleges cancelled classes because af the cold but Trinity kept an going. Naw I am glad we did nat stap because I'll be able ta see you saan.

Dear Teri,

I am so glad there are only three weeks left before the end of school. Really, I love Trin and all, but I need to get out of here. I told Dave that I wish we did not have classes that we could just live here together and goof off. Na wark or anything. Just hang out and what not. I think that if the weather was not so beautiful I would be more motivated to write papers and study for exams.

Friday night was the usual for me. That's right, a movie at Bremen and pizza afterwards. I did make up for the predictability of Friday night by doing something completely out of character on Saturday evening. I went by myself to see a Reader's Theater production, written by James Schaap, called "Things We Couldn't Say."

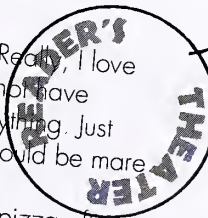

I can't believe I went alone - very odd. If you were here I would have dragged you with me. Anyway, I am very glad I went. I was very impressed with the entire production. The actors were excellent. A freshman, Christine Naordemier, played an elderly Dutch woman, Diet, who wrestles with the memories of her experiences during the Nazi occupation of the Netherlands. Another first year student, Karie Adams, played Diet as a young woman. They were outstanding. In fact the whole cast, including a student director, was made up of first and second year students. I'm so glad Trinity can look forward to having them around for another two or three years.

You know I am not a big theatrical production buff, but this thing was really great. I was lost in the story line for hours. I think because the story was told in first person it was easier to become involved. Believe it or not, I had to fight not to cry during several parts. I loved it.

Well, that's my weekend in a nutshell. What's up with you?

Write back soon,

Amanda

Dear Jerry,

You would not believe my weekend - absolutely insane. As you know, last night I helped out at the Trinity Auction in the gym. That was fun, but tiring. I thought I would love modeling stuff, but I ended up walking around on the stage with cards forever. Oh well. I did get to hang around with G. awhile.

Saturday morning I got up at the crack of dawn to help out with the Trinity Troll Trot/Stroll. When they asked me to help a few weeks ago, I thought that would be fun. I love running and I don't mind getting up early on a - Saturday no big deal right?

Well it was raining steadily when I woke up and continued to rain throughout the morning. What a pain. I was freezing and cold and kinda tired from the night before. I really felt bad for the runners, but they had good attitudes about the conditions. Most didn't seem to mind the mud and puddles.

All morning some other volunteers were preparing and cooking Wisconsin brats. When they first started to grill 'em, I thought they smelled good. Four hours later I was more than a little sick of the smell; but I ate one anyway.

I returned to my room to shower and wash my clothes, which stank like brats. After that I felt a little refreshed and figured I should check out the fair. The actual fair was neat. The crafts in the gym were wonderful. I picked up something for my mom for Mother's day. There was a lot more I wanted to buy, but I am basically broke until I sell my books back. By the way, when are your exams?

So, now that you know all of that, how was your weekend, week or month for that matter?! Write me sometime. It's a great way to put off studying Calculus.

Your favorite Troll,
Elaine

It was a time to rejoice, and we did. In South Africa, a miracle occurred - free, fair, peaceful elections and a government of reconciliation led by a prisoner, a prophet of peace.

This celebration was not on Trinity's agenda. The Committee on Ethnic Diversity was busy looking at campus problems. But as I walked away from the year's last CED meeting I started to think of what we hadn't noticed: Trinity knows about South Africa's struggle from years of meetings, discussions and prayers. Now we were forgetting to celebrate, as a community, God's answer to prayer.

Bob Rice pointed out the coincidence of Nelson Mandela's inauguration with the year's last Faculty Association meeting on May 10. I talked about having a celebration with other CED and Organization for African-American Unity members. Everybody wanted to join in celebration. So, the college had a party in the plaza in front of the library.

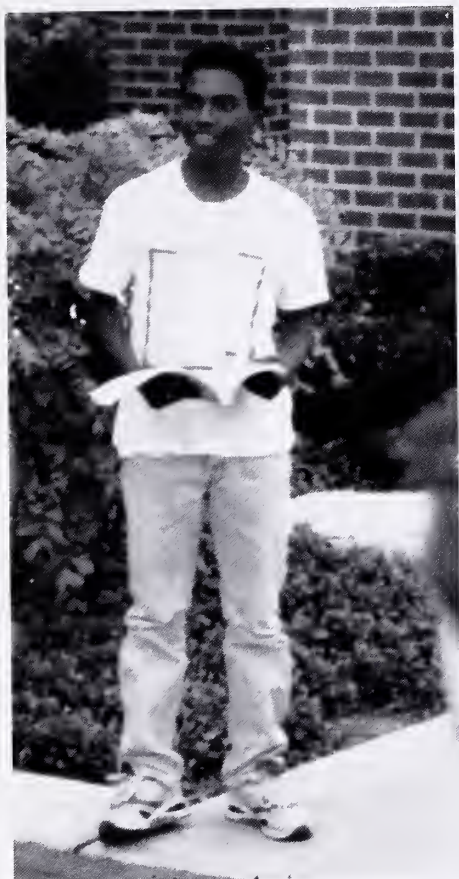

In the brilliant sunlight, with a boom box blaring Afro-pop and with tables of punch and cookies, we gathered. Some library-bound students wandered over to witness a South African visitor sing his new national anthem. Brad Breems started with an introduction and welcome and various members of the Trinity community offered testimonies.

After the years of oppression in South Africa, and years of reflection and Christian analysis by so many of us here, this acknowledgement was both celebrative and reflective. It gave us pause to contemplate, in the jumble of music, the people and the place, and how we all participate in structures and change.

Our God reigns at Trinity and around the world!

Dear Folks,

Let me tell you, you would have been proud! Sorry you couldn't make it for Jake's graduation. He missed you, and said so. As grandparents, you've been a big part of his life and faith, bigger than you realize.

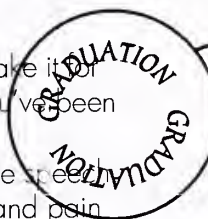

The ceremony had a lot of pageantry, great singing, and a strange speech. Very few are memorable, I know. This one had to do with suffering and pain that graduates might face, some sooner, some later, but all eventually. I suppose it's true, but kind of a gloomy note to send them out with. The graduates seemed to enjoy themselves in spite of it. Lots of hugs, smiles, tears and pictures. Apparently, Jake had more friends than we knew of. He introduced me to a lot of pros, which I took to be a good sign. Then again, maybe he still owes them papers.

I think this was a good place for him. He's certainly changed since starting out as something of a shy and timid kid. I think he's been challenged and learned to think for himself. He's not afraid of Chicago. He loved showing us around. His faith seems deeper and more important to him. He wants us to go to his "home" church, Palos Reformed, on Sunday.

Don't forget, you had a lot to do with these developments. He spoke of your prayers for him while he's been away. You never know, I guess, what makes the difference. He's changed, but we still recognize him - he wore a Tigers t-shirt under his graduation robe!

It's gone by too fast. Four years. He has a few leads, but he's still looking for work. We're hoping he finds something back home, but I think he wants to stay in Chicago. We'll see. Don't stop praying now.

Your son,
his dad

Dear Leanne,
Hi! How are you? I wanted to write and thank you for the present you gave me for graduation! I love it!

I'm sorry you couldn't make it to the commencement exercises. Mom & Dad, Grandpa & Grandma, and my brother and sister drove from Iowa early in the morning to make it on time.

All my classmates were in their caps and gowns, somewhat nervously awaiting the procession. Commencement itself wasn't such a big deal — our speaker was James R. Kak from Crystal Cathedral and Dr. Baatsma spoke. I got to sing a duet with Ryan one last time; that brought tears to my eyes. The one thing I remember most is walking across the stage, receiving my diploma, and realizing that I was finally finished. I swear that Burton (I can call him that now . . . ) WINKED at me!

It was strange because the week or so before graduation I was a bit moody and depressed about leaving my friends at Trinity. But then graduation day finally came and I was so excited! Now it's time to go into the "real world," earn money, be (more) responsible, and start paying back loans! Holding my diploma in my hand, I was a little scared because I was unsure of what the future holds. I'm also sad to say goodbye to Trinity and to the Christian school system. I've spent some of the best years of my life at this school.

You know I will miss Trinity and all the friends I have made over the past four years. As you can tell from my letters, I am really grateful to the faculty and staff for the education I have received. (OK, I did complain every so often, but . . . ) I can't wait to see what God has in store for me in the years to come!

I'd love to hear from you sometime soon! Take care.

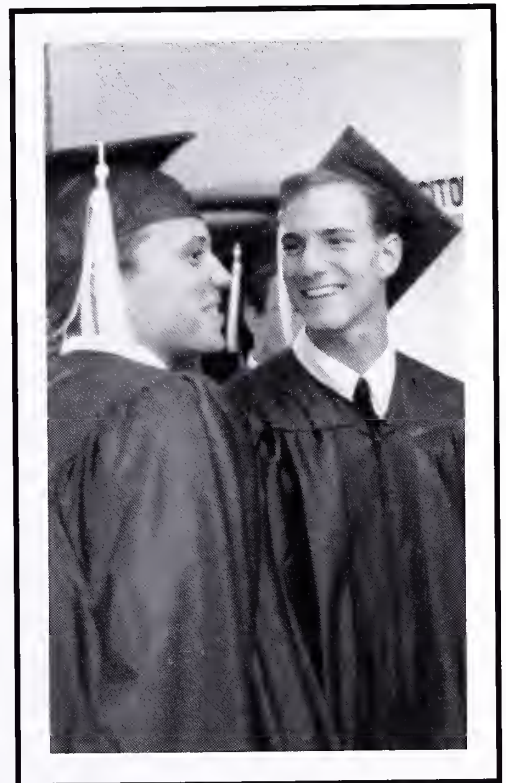

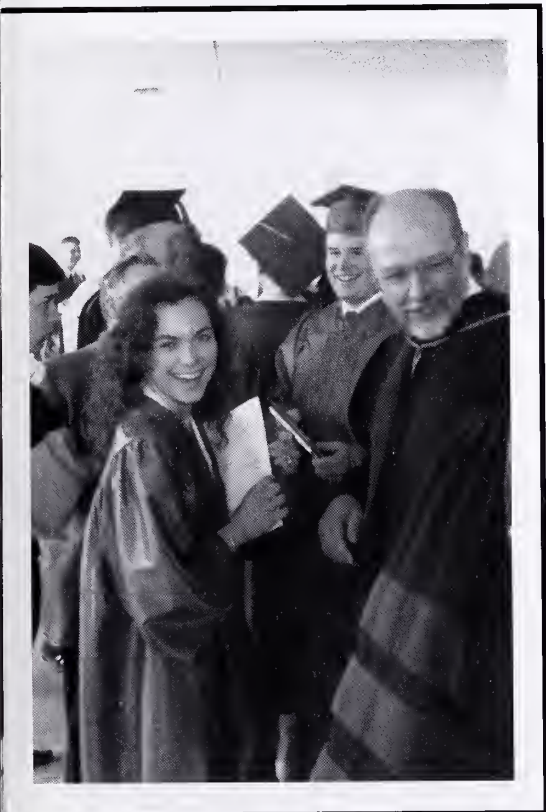

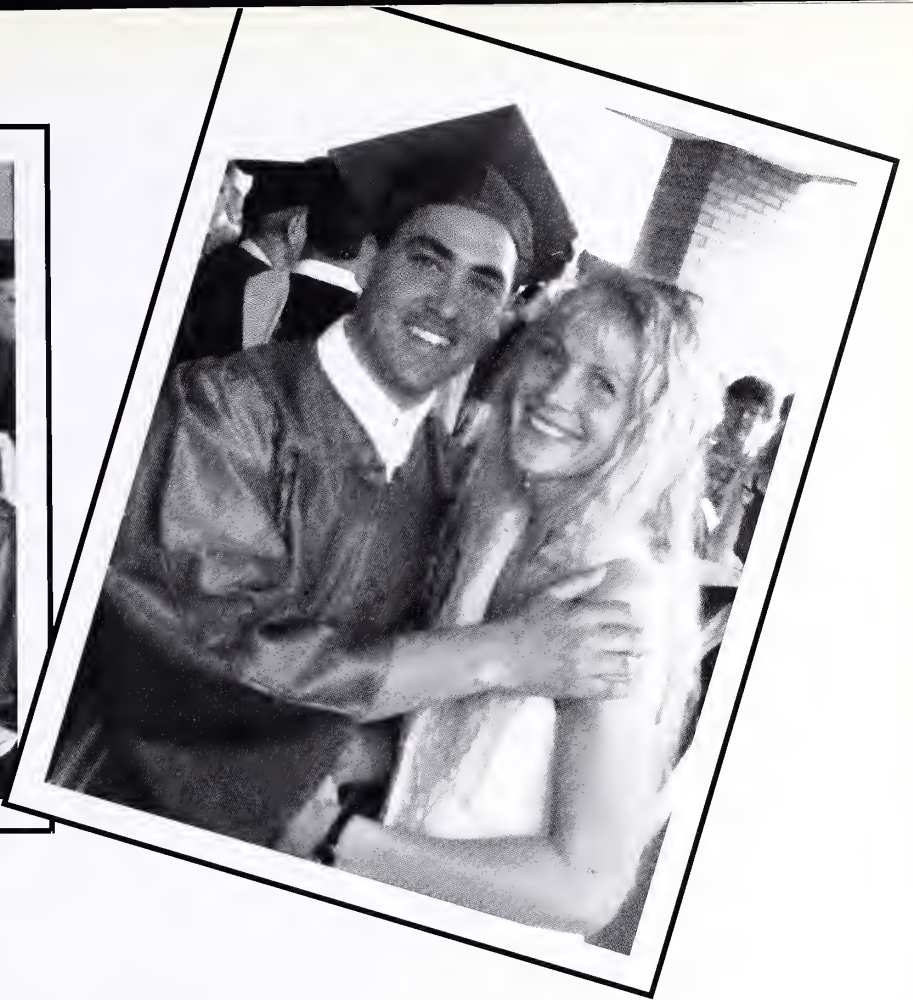

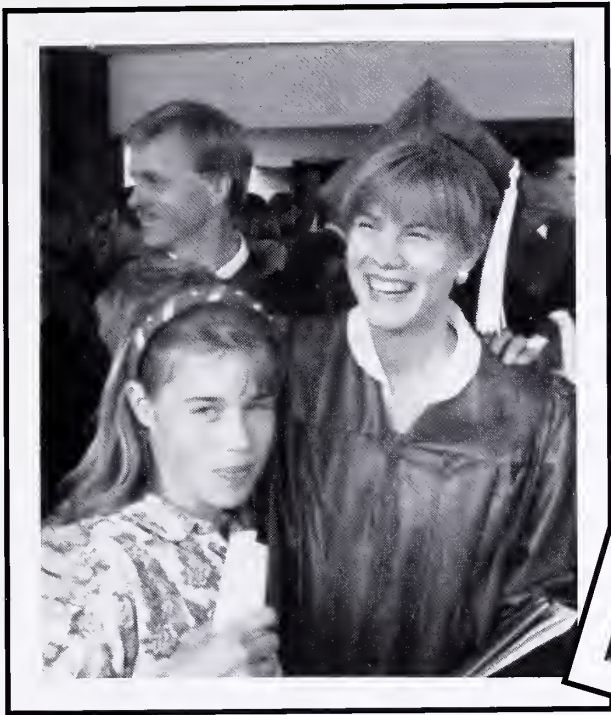

Love,
Michelle

HAPPY BIRTHDAY TO:

CHRISTINE LOMBARD
MANDY MORRISON
CODY LIMBACK
AND DAVE LARSEN

Today's Chapel service will feature REM and Pearl Jam opening for Michael W. Smith. Chris Verstrate will act as MC.

***POTPIE***

Need a Hair Cut? Lt. Don Macho of the USMC will be cutting hair Tuesday night in the basement of South Hall. Allow at least thirty seconds for a haircut.

The Student Dev. office is hosting a gripe and groan session for all students and faculty who are frustrated by the unusually long lines for lunch during the 11:50-12:20 time slot. Since the line usually runs well past the Student Dev. office, feel free to just stop in instead of waiting in line by the porch.

FACULTY FORUM TODAY: Dr. Don Sinnema, Dr. Mike De Vries, and Dr. David Klanderman will present a combined paper entitled "Beyond Freudian Calculus: Integration and Psychoanalysis in N-Dimensional Vector Space Considered Within a Holistic Archetypal Morality of Reformed Christian Psychological Sine Waves," from 3:30 to 6:50pm.

INTRAMURAL TROLL WRESTLING INFO: Get your five person team ready, the uniforms arrive next Tuesday. We have a limited number of places, so sign up today and we'll see you down by the creek!

Students who feel like big dorks because they don't have soccer shorts, shirts, socks, or shoes should wear all the time should meet in the student center Friday at 2:30.

EDUCATION MAJORS

Loretto Flows, Sally Den Hortog, Joy Jenicek, Cothy Peterson, Laurel Bordwell (Goesel), Jennifer Nichols, Mott Ooms.

MISSING: Whoever removed the fountain from the library lobby, please return it ASAP.

FROM THE COMPUTER LAB: Due to budget cuts, student files will be randomly deleted off the internal disk of the computers starting next week.

$$$$ There is money in the admissions office, but you can't have it.

SOCIOLOGY/SOCIAL WORK/PRISON CLUB: The sociology club has reserved a van for anyone who would like to spend the weekend in a prison. Please contact Dr. Breems for reservations. NOTE: those of you who have already signed up must specify your choice of roommate. Still available: Eddie the Shork, Vinnie the Mangler, and Big Mo.

"HEALTH CAREERS" STUDENTS: Your assignment is to look in the "Help wanted Health or Medical" section of the Sunday paper and then apply, interview, and get a job. We will discuss advancement and retirement in our next class.

The maintenance office will be closed Thursday, September 16 at 1:04PM due to budget cuts. In case of emergency, seek a maintenance person in the broom closet under the stairs in the Molenhouse center. The maintenance building will be temporarily rented out to the city of Palos Heights.

The business office will be closed Friday, September 18, at 1:04PM due to budget cuts. In case of financial emergency, seek a business person in the dining hall.

The gym will be closed for remodeling on Tuesday, September 21 at 1:04PM. In case of emergency ... wait a minute. What kind of emergency could you have? If you really need to exercise, run down to the gym and back.

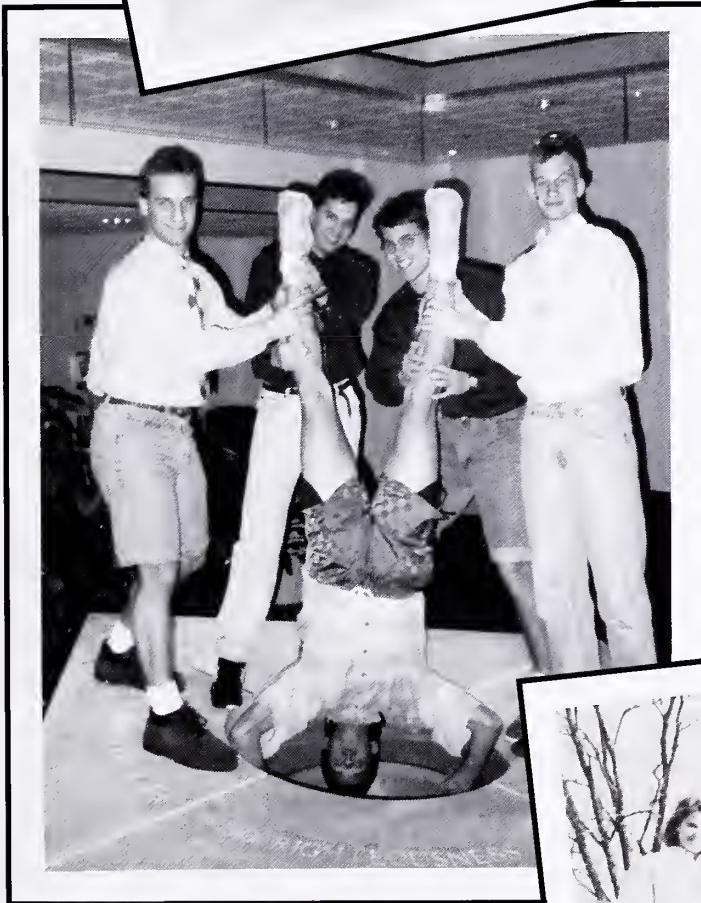

Planning on leaving your car on campus over reading recess? Please park it in the main lot by the dining hall under the red and white sign that says, "Kaye's Used Cars Bargains Galore."

Students and Staff: Have you reserved your seats for "Things We Couldn't Say" yet, or are you waiting for the "Schindler's List" and "Things We Couldn't Say" box set?

Dr. Van Kley's classes will be performing experiments in the gym today, so the men's volleyball team will practice in the chem. lab.

VISIT DAY: This Thursday 320 prospective students from the Chicago Christian, Timothy Christian and Illiana Christian High schools will be visiting Trinity. The maintenance dept. wants all resident students to park in the Dominick's parking lot, just on the other side of 127th and Ridgeland. Thank you for making our visitors feel welcome!

The Department of Campus Ministry, in cooperation with the Intervarsity Optometry Fellowship, plans to develop focus groups for the 94-95 school year. Focus Groups will look at and meet to discuss their vision difficulties and experiences with various forms of corrective wear. See Dr. Hamstra or Lisa Trousdale for an application or more information. (Large print applications available.)

CONDO FOR RENT: Thinking about Spring Break? Think about a condo overlooking the "main drag" in Gulf Shores, AL six bedrooms, three baths, fourcar garage, two fireplaces, and horse stables just $500 a week! See Nancy in Financial Aid. Also, inquire about an amazingly good deal on a bridge in the metropolitan New York area.

ALL STUDENTS AND STAFF who are required by their work or studies to spend time near the second floor of VanderVelde may purchase earplugs in the bookstore to protect against accidental deafness caused by unusually loud laughter coming from the Philosophy and Psychology offices.

ADVENTUROUS STUDENTS WANTED! If you enjoy seeing new places, meeting new people, and experiencing new cultures, the Semester in Spain program is ideal for you. Although, if the thought of seeing Chicago scares the maracas out of you, please don't bother to apply.

JOB FAIR: If you're looking far on on campus work/study position far 94-95, this is the week to find one. The lists of jobs and contacts is pasted around campus. If you already have on an campus job, check with your employer to find out if you can work far less than minimum wage next year.

Snack Bar Special !!! Free car with the purchase of a Rice Krispies treat. Tonight only.

Exam Schedule: All exams will be held on Friday at 8am. We hope this will simplify matters far those of you who were always complaining about the old system.

HELP WANTED: P.T. positions available now, leading to F.T. in the summer - hands-on labor must have own boats. Experience with hags is a plus. If interested, see John Koayinga ASAP!

MEN'S AND WOMEN'S CREW: Try outs are today at 3:45pm. Jag down to the Cal Sag boat launch by Lake Katherine; wear your suits.

CAMP TALL TURF is hiring. This Christian camp serves . . . hold on a minute. Tall Turf? What's with that? I mean, how can turf be tall? Turf is short stuff we walk on, the tall stuff gets called a field. Tall Turf - what kind of a name is that?! Might as well call themselves Big Dirt or Long Twig.

Production of the 1994 Allelu began in the fall of 1993. For most of the first semester, the Business staff was working hard on getting a record number of advertisements for the Allelu. Thanks Jill, for organizing and drawing all of the ads. Thanks for calling everyone and their great uncle, Kris and Barb.

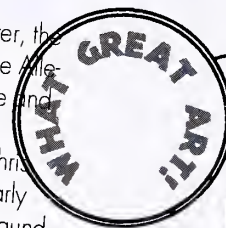

The Photography staff was busy from day one trying to keep up with Trinity life. Chris Olken and Kathy Mc Mullen spent countless hours in the dark room. Dan Bierma nearly lived at Trinity soccer, baseball and basketball games. The entire photography staff found themselves taking random photos at all hours and locations for the group photos. They really came through.

The layout staff spent a lot of time brainstorming about the book. If they had not been so willing to work around delays and complications, things could have been really tough. I really appreciated their flexibility. Thanks Carrie, for doing all kinds of extras whenever I needed you.

The copy staff wrote some of the best Allelu copy I've seen. I appreciated their enthusiastic approach and willingness to try something new. The staff as a whole should be proud of their work. A special note of thanks goes to Shelly Lucas and Alison VanDer Laan for typing nearly all of the copy and to Debbie Groenewald for writing way more than her share. Thanks to Prof. Boerman-Carnell for the hilarious Times copy.

Finally, I should thank Chris Huisman for graciously accepting responsibility for ALL of the art work in the 1994 Allelu. His work was great and he handled last minute deadlines very well. Thank you Chris. Dave Larsen served as the adviser and provided support in stressful situations. His advice and encouragement helped me immensely. The publications department at Trinity was a great help when we ran into photo troubles. Thanks Jen, Ginny and Anita. Finally, thanks to Linda Canrath, who provided needed advice and information.

The copy for the 1994 Allelu was printed in Spartan Light. The cover is a four-color lithograph designed by Chris Huisman. The 34th volume of the Allelu contains 128 pages.
